"Blessed be the LORD God of Israel; For He hath visited and redeemed His people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; That we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our lives." VETERANS

WARS: WHO ARE THEY GOOD FOR?

by Ed Sommerville

There is hardly a week goes by that I don't get close to a dozen appeals from organizations to help veterans. These would include Disabled, Blinded, Paralyzed, Hospitalized etc. Over the years I have given thousands of dollars to these groups, as it is hard to realize what these men are going through. (I sometimes wonder how much of this money is actually going to the veterans) Some just boys out of high school and not knowing if their lives will ever get any better.

Today's troops are also faced with disabilities not attributed to enemy fire or explosives. Some are brought on by the vaccines and numerous shots that are forced on them. Others are subjected to depleted uranium that is used in our armor piercing shells. Just a small speck of this radioactive dust inhaled into the lungs will never go away. It causes permanent respiratory, as well as other serious problems.

Using this depleted uranium goes against the Geneva Convention on warfare, as it is radioactive and will remain there for a thousand generations. Many of the babies being born over there are born without arms and some are so deformed that I hesitate to even write about it. Much of this dust is moved around by the wind and some of it has been picked up and carried as far as England. If this war ever ends, it will not end for the people over there. We will also have to face the problems that result from our troops inhaling it.

There is an old saying: Old men start wars and young men fight them. This has never been as obvious as it is now. We are now involved in two wars with countries that have never done anything to threaten our freedom or safety (those countries are not threatening to vaccinate our children and grandchildren, and they are not coming here to confiscate your weapons—know your enemy!). In my lifetime we have never been involved in a war with any nation that could attack us and take away our freedom. As far as Pearl Harbour goes, was it a sneak attack? To our sailors and soldiers over there, it was. But to our President and his inner circle it was no surprise, and thanks to the Freedom of Information Act after 50 years of secrecy this has been confirmed by Naval Intelligence. This attack was used to get us into the war, as most of our people did not want another war in Europe. That is why 9/11 is referred to as the second Pearl Harbour, as it worked so well then. Although millions are now aware of its cover-up, I think it could be years before we have a real investigation conducted by American patriots instead of politicians whose only purpose was and still is to conceal the truth and protect those involved in the greatest mass murder in our nation's history (an investigation may happen after all the perpetrators have died and cannot be held accountable anymore!)

One thing that really irritates me is when I read the many appeals for money is that they hardly ever fail to mention that our troops are over there fighting for our freedom and also fighting terrorism. Yet in my lifetime I have watched many of our freedoms disappear and be replaced with unjust laws, endless licenses, regulations and permits. Needless to say none of these were the result of an attack or war. As far as our being over there to kill terrorists, we could possibly be creating more of them than we are killing. There is one simple axiom that our people have never accepted. It is that Wars are never fought for the reasons we are told. Our present wars confirm this fact.

At the end of WWI General (Smedley) Butler was America's best loved and decorated soldier of that era. He wrote book entitled War is a Racket. In it he explains why in this famous quote:

"I spent 33 years and four months in active military service and during that period I spent most of my time as a high class thug for Big Business, for Wall Street and the Bankers. In short, I was a racketeer, a gangster for capitalism. I helped make Mexico and especially Tampico safe for American oil interests in 1914. I helped make Haiti and Cuba a decent place for the National City Bank boys to collect revenues in. I helped in the raping of half a dozen Central American Republics for the benefit of Wall Street. I helped purify Nicaragua for the International Banking House of Brown Brothers in 1902-1912. I brought light to the Dominican Republic for the American sugar interests in 1916. I helped make Honduras right for the American fruit companies in 1903. In China in 1927 I helped see to it that Standard Oil went on its way unmolested. Looking back on it, I might have given Al Capone a few hints. The best he could do was to operate his racket in three districts. I operated on three continents."

General Butler turned against corporate America after he found out they were profiteering from their wars. Some of the major corporations made huge profits supplying the troops with needed commodities. Does this sound familiar?

We now have air bases in at least 130 countries with over 900 military bases worldwide. We don't need anywhere near that amount to maintain a more than adequate defense. Do you think there is a possibility that Corporate America might have a use for them? The cost of these alone plus the billions it takes to maintain them is not justified for the greatest debtor nation on Earth. I feel that for the last few decades we have accelerated the business of empire building that cannot be in any way contributing to our national defense.

I always keep this in mind; the first casualty of war is truth. Propaganda is the greatest tool used to jump-start any war. There must always be a reason to start it so they come up with ideas that actually hide the real ones. The easiest one is to demonize a leader along with false reports on what is happening there, since only a few know what the real reason is, as we are told only what their elite media wants us to know (and few are able to check the facts). Even when the truth comes out later it is quickly glossed over as the people including our veteran groups do not like the thought of us fighting a war for any other reasons than what we have been told. I don't think we are doing our veterans or troops a favor by giving them the false impression that any war we are involved in is a lawful, holy and just war and that God is on our side whatever we do or how many we kill and maim.

Our media constantly assures us that what we are doing over there is good no matter how many are killed on either side. They also like to convey the idea that anyone who disagrees with them is a terrorist and unpatriotic, like Jane Fonda or Abby Hoffman during the Vietnam era. I can assure you that many of us are the conservatives of yesterday, not to be confused with the Neo-Cons of today. We are not as easily swayed by propaganda that has helped greatly in bringing about the problems we now face. We are no longer "The City on a Hill" that all the world looked up to as we have become an aggressive and war-like nation practicing torture on enemies, that many countries do not accept, coming from a "Christian Nation." This (undeclared) war like others has also brought about many broken marriages and fatherless children (which was part of the intention behind the war). All of our troops over there are not that happy about being a part of it as witnessed by the dramatic increase in suicides and drug use. No part of these (police action) wars are good for the average soldier, but they are great for corporate America.

One more thing I find very hard to accept: We have spent over one trillion dollars on this war with billions unaccounted for and the private contractors along with the bankers and corporate America literally stealing billions for themselves and leaving people like myself to help the veterans. Am I out of line to think that these people who are getting filthy rich from the war that has given them so much, shouldn't think that they should give back to the veterans a small part to those who have given so much to their cause? Since our elected politicians can give hundreds of billions to our bankers why is it so impossible for them to take care of their troops? I'm sure that a few billion dollars would be a great help in eliminating a lot of the problems our troops face daily as the result of their war. As Ron Paul said, "Bring them home" I feel that is the best thing we can do for our troops and put an end to future pain and problems for our vets.

About a week ago I received a T-shirt in the mail from a veterans organization. On the front and back it said 'Proud to be an American.' First of all I would like to state that I feel very fortunate to have been born in America and raised in a Christian nation before it became Judeo-Christian. It was a time when we still had strong Christian values that were even prevalent in the public schools. Then the "destroyers" moved in and things started to change. In the sixties we went through a period of the drug culture and the morals that went along with it. Now we come to the point that we have murdered close to fifty million unborn children in the womb (while we hear endless stories of what Hitler supposedly did to Jews). With the help of these destroyers we have managed to remove God from the schools and most of our government. We as a nation have lowered ourselves to the level of the Bolsheviks and the Israelis along with other countries torturing prisoners. We have also allied our nation to the most Marxist, Godless, racist and brutal nation on the face of the Earth. President Washington warned us against this in his Farewell Address and the Bible states the same admonition, "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." These things along with many others makes it hard to be proud of the secular and almost Godless country we have turned into and makes one wonder if Christians should be proud of the New America. All of us, including myself are responsible for allowing all these things to come to pass. The result is, we are all suffering from the consequences. Do we really have the Biblical right to sing "God bless America"?

In today's politically-correct system we live in, we are told that there is no such thing as a conspiracy, at least not in our country. Conspiracy is not a new word that was coined by the liberals, as it is mentioned in the Bible eight times, over 3,000 years ago. Conspiracy: Secret planning with others to do something wrong. The idea to bring in a One World Government, as referred to today as the New World Order has been around for many generations. All the changes that have happened in our nation have been carefully planned over the years by men that feel they have the right to rule the World. It is more politically correct to use the word agenda as it does not sound so ominous as conspirators. These men have stuck to their agenda and they meet regularly every year to plan for the following year's advancement of their agenda.

Although I did not vote for him, I now regard John Kennedy as the greatest president in my lifetime. I will close this with excerpts from a speech given by him in

"For we are opposed around the world by a monolithic and ruthless Conspiracy that relies primarily on covert means for expanding its sphere of influence on infiltration instead of invasion, on subversion instead of elections, on intimidation instead of free choice (vaccinations, anyone?), on guerillas by night instead of armies by day. It is a system which has conscripted vast human and material resources into a tightly knit, highly efficient machine that combines military, diplomatic, intelligence, economic, scientific and political operations. Its mistakes are buried, not headlined. Its dissenters are silenced, not praised. No expenditure is questioned, no rumor is printed, no secret is revealed." President Wilson stated that very thing forty years earlier."

I am appalled and saddened at the obvious fact that so many have sacrificed their very lives for reasons they are unaware of. I think it's time to stop glorifying these wars into something they are not, as the cost is too high in both dollars we don't have and lives we cannot afford to lose.

THE BELIEVER IN JESUS AND DISASTERS

Supplies

There are many theories as to what will become of banks, reserve bank systems, cash, etc., if there is a major recession. It is doubtful that there will be a total money crash unless the Banking System allows it, or engineers it. The time of traditional economics has passed, and in theory, the whole money system should have failed long ago. We are in the age of money manipulation and figures in computers are not real money.

The general feeling among those writing about and discussing the issue of preparedness seems to be that life after an economic disaster will be greatly enhanced by the ability to barter goods for goods. If you already produce a surplus of food or other essential products, or are skilled in some essential service that everyone needs, then you may already be prepared for a system of barter. Also, many are advising that gold or silver coins represent a safer form of in which to keep savings than are cash and electronic transfer records. While gold and silver could always be traded for food and other necessities, gold together with fiat paper currency sometimes becomes essentially worthless. Have we not read something about a bag of gold not being able to buy a loaf of bread?

If you have no religious or biblical scruples against saving money in the bank, then there can be no reasonable objection to saving (additionally or instead) barterable commodities. Gold, silver, food and fuel are better than money in a crisis, but the latter two can be used in a practical way, whereas one would not get fat on trying to eat gold and silver! Values will only increase in a situation where everybody wants them and few have them. You can buy a year or more's supply of food packaged in air-tight, pest-proof containers which can either be eaten by your family or else bartered for toilet paper when the market shelves are bare. If there is no toilet paper, then a stock of old newspapers or books can be torn up, especially at the library.

The great thing about turning your symbolic assets (money in the bank) into real goods is that you never have to regret your investment—even if the crisis never occurs. If there is no crisis in the years to come, then you will spend (as usual) a certain amount of money for groceries that year. What harm is done by taking the same money and pre-buying the groceries for that year in air-tight buckets or drums? If we are talking about rice, wheat, beans, peas, salt, sugar, maybe some powdered milk, etc., these can be eaten by electric light or by candle light. I know that some of these precautions cost more money than many people have. Some families do not have enough money at this time to do many of the things I am suggesting. But I am hoping to raise your awareness of where the money you would normally spend on luxuries or entertainment might be better spent. A year's supply of plain, wholesome, packaged food might run you perhaps $600 - $1000 per person in the family. A basement accumulating these containers probably makes more sense than a family room with a new home theatre system. Perhaps a late-model car can be sold for the price of an older car and a year's supply of food for a family of six. The most painless way to accumulate a buffer food supply would be to simply buy a few extra cans of food every time you shop for groceries, and put the surplus aside for a rainy day (add the new items to the back of the line, and use the ones from the front of the line for stock rotation). When stores run sales involving deep price cuts on certain non-perishable items, it might be the time to pick-up a case or several extra gallons at significant savings.

Ask yourself what things you would wish to have on hand if there were no stores open for, say a month. You would probably wish to have a first aid kit, flashlight with batteries, extra toothpaste, soap and cleansers, contact lens solutions, any prescription drugs you might be dependent on, etc. Toilet paper has already been mentioned. It is advisable also to have some bottled water on hand for drinking, cooking and cleaning (use glass bottles rather than plastic). To be sure, a carton of matches would be of greater value than a bar of gold (or some good gas lighters) The thought of rubbing sticks together to light a fire might be too much for some people.

Also, if you can back-up your home heating with wood heat (and or cooking - wood stove, or pot-belly stove). If wood heat is not an option where you live, you may want to put out the minimal investment for enough "space blankets" for the whole family. These extremely compact items, which look like a sheet of aluminium foil and retain an extraordinary percentage of your body's heat, can usually be purchased for pretty cheaply from many outdoor supply sources.

It also would make very good sense to obtain some way of generating electricity for basic uses. I'm sure that our readers are aware of various alternative energy options, such as wind generators, solar panels, and bicycle-driven generators—though a good old Coleman generator would prove more versatile and portable. If a family has more than one option available for electricity, it would make the adjustment to the loss of the power grid much smoother (Note: if you have solar panels that (also) feed into the grid, be aware that if there is no grid power, you also have no solar power! Only with a full off-grid battery back-up system will power continue)

At the midnight hour those who have not provided enough oil for their lamps might not find the merchants who sell oil open for business. It is better to have enough before hand. But remember that there are saints who barely survive on their meagre incomes already, and who have no ability to provide a buffer for their family against future crises. It would seem good for churches to develop (as Joseph did in Egypt) a food bank for their members who are unable to afford the luxury of surplus food storage. The ideal of Scripture is “Those who gathered much had no extra, and those who gathered little had no lack” (Ex. 15:18, 2 Cor 8:13-15).

Circumstances Beyond Disaster

Decisions with reference to some of the above options must be partially affected by consideration of precisely what kind of society can be expected to emerge from an end-time crisis. Will things get better quickly, or only after years of chaos—or will they get worse instead? What kind of challenges will be the post-crisis civilization present to Christian families? Will there be local government, federal government, world government—or what? Will society turn back to God, or further away from Him? Will Christians be sought out for their counsel—or for their heads? Will the worst problems for Christians be shortages of food, marauding criminal gangs, or official government persecution? In my view, persecution for one’s belief is certain (count on it after ‘same-sex’ “marriage” laws are passed!). Please note here that my use of the word “Christian” is used only in the sense of God’s people who believe in the redemption that is in Jesus.

On the bright side, a technological cave-in might prevent the Prime Minister, President or anyone else, from being able to exert any control what-soever over the populace. Some ‘experts’ think that nothing broader than local or county government could function. They believe there will perhaps be seven to ten years of economic chaos, followed by a resemblance of the 1890s than that of the 2000s. This would mean the end of the Welfare State, of the Department of Education, or the Inland Revenue (Tax) Service or equivalent, and of all the grandiose Big Brother-esque plans of the New World Order. This is very encouraging. But is it what the future holds? Only time will tell.

There is still the threat of China and maverick nations or terrorists with nuclear weapons. If the NATO weapons systems go haywire, only the hand of God is powerful enough to prevent China or anyone else from pursuing an unstoppable course of aggression. China is said to have the Biblical number of 200,000 horsemen with the bows and arrows (British made) as we can read about in prophecy. I fully believe that the hand of God alone is more than adequate to protect God’s people wherever they are from any designs anyone may have against us. But then we must ask why God would want to save people who have spit in His face and turned their back to Him. One might well reason that economic collapse is itself a form of God’s judgment upon industrialized civilization (as are severe drastic weather conditions, which cause untold damage in terms of dollars, and even cost lives). History and Scripture portray a pattern of God’s sending wave after wave of disaster upon nations upon whom He has decided to vent His wrath (e.g. Lev. 26:18, 21, 24, 28 and Isa. 5:25; 9:12, 17, 21; 10:4 and Eze. 26:3 and Rev. 9:12).

We must confess not to know for sure

- If there will be a crisis, or whether troubles will start in the near future.
 - How the matter will resolve itself, or if it will:
 - What society will look like a decade from now
- This ignorance should not paralyze us, but should lead us to take precautions with the broadest spectrum of possible scenarios in mind, and leave the rest to God. The one thing that is certain is that God is faithful to those who cast themselves wholly upon Him and who do His bidding. One thing for sure is that slackness in knowing and doing God’s Will is a luxury no one can afford. To be sure, God has not sent His warnings for no purpose. Our place is to believe God and act accordingly.

Some Suggested Points for Prayer and Meditation

The greatest form of preparation that parents can make for the safety of their families is to commit them to God and to commit all concerns to Him by believing, submissive prayer. It is possible to “have not” because we “ask not” (James 4:2). Some things may occur with or without our prayers, but if we neglect to pray, we will never know whether a given disaster might have been averted had we only prevailed to lay hold on God.

If Sodom had been spared, it would not have been so much because of the ten (non-existent) righteous, but because of Abraham’s intercession (Gen. 18:23-33). If Abraham had prayed that God would spare the city for one righteous inhabitant, Sodom might have been spared to this day. We will never know, but it could have possibly postponed a gruesome judgment that came upon thousands of men, women and children. One reason that our world has come to its present crisis is, doubtless that “there is none that calleth upon [God’s] name, that stirreth up himself to take hold of [God] for [He] hast hid [His] face from us, and hast consumed us, because of our iniquities” (Isa. 64:7).

With reference to any indicated threat, what might informed Christians pray for? Let me make some suggestions. First, pray the prime (but seldom prayed with understanding) prayer that God’s Kingdom come and His will be done. That God would send reformation of the church and a revival of pure Christianity is a request that can always be counted on to fall within the category of “things God wills.” If the prayer of the apostles (Acts 4:23-30) serves as a model of appropriate prayer, then to pray for boldness, faithfulness and fruitfulness would take priority over prayer for personal safety, but there is nothing inappropriate about prayer for personal safety either (2 Thes. 3:2). Additionally, you might consider praying for the following:

1. That Christian families the world over might be spiritually prepared for whatever may come;
2. That Christian parents might not be separated from their children by “protective” governmental measures (e.g. vaccination)
3. That God would clearly inform Christian parents of any course of action that He knows will better prepare them for whatever He knows is coming.
4. That you and your children might be faithful even to death.
5. For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour - 1 Tim 2:2-3.

Child Preparation

On this final point, I should think it obvious that Christian parents make it their top priority to see to it that their children genuinely know God, and are prepared to meet the Lord triumphantly, if they were to face mortal danger during their childhood years. I realize that such thoughts are unpleasant to parents, but what do you think Christian parents in persecuted lands teach their children? Do you think it can't happen here? And, happen very quickly!

When our children reached the age of being able to understand the English language, we made a point of acquainting them with the following, unfrighting facts:

1. It is God's good pleasure to raise us up into His Kingdom.

2. We will someday die, but this presents no terrors to those who love God.

3. To die in the will of God and to be taken into His presence is a great privilege to be looked forward to.

Since eternity is endless, and life is short, it doesn't matter whether we enter that eternal bliss after a "long" life, or after a relatively "short" life. All lives are short compared to eternity. Since we have no fear of death, and have re-enforced these truths to our children by scripture and by missionary/martyr biographies, our children do not exhibit any fear of death. I do believe that they are prepared for that inevitable, universal human event. For which only neglectful parents would fail to prepare their children.

However, we do not only wish to prepare our children to die, but also to survive and to live. Remember, if we do not provide for our children we are worse than infidels. We think it more valuable for them to know how to produce food and clothing and to function as redemptive parts of human society. In the education of our children, even if we foresaw no impending crisis, Christians ought to foresee the coming crisis of adult life as sufficient cause to weight their children's education heavily on the side of character strengths like courage, industry, integrity, compassion, humility and piety (not necessarily in that order). An education such as that commonly afforded in the modern educational system is more likely to prepare children to "make a living" than to "live." Children who are well taught in the latter will have little difficulty with the former. In fact, they will find that "all these things" shall be added unto them, while they concentrate their energies upon the pursuit of God's Kingdom and His righteousness - Matt. 6:33. Those who know how to live find that making a living is thrown in with the deal.

If your children have become accustomed to a rather affluent standard of living, one of the biggest favours you can do them (whether there is a catastrophe or not) would be to wean them off such lifestyle expectations as soon as possible. Many Christian families, amazingly, have so pampered their children as to make it exceedingly difficult for them to be content "having food and raiment" - 1 Tim. 6:8. Though well-intentioned, parents who make materialists of their children, are doing them great spiritual harm, whereas those children who are taught early-on to "let your lifestyle be without covetousness, but be content with such things as you have" - Heb. 13:5-6, will be spiritually fitted for any circumstance that the future may hold (it's hard to teach these lessons to children unless the parents have learned lessons themselves).

Teaching children to ignore their own denials and to have compassion on others who are suffering will render them of great value to God and to society. In any disaster, there will never be a surplus of selfless young people pouring themselves out for those less fortunate. Taking the children to rest homes to read to, talk to, or pray with the abandoned elderly, or having them do housework or gardening for some single mom in the church or the neighbourhood, will help develop this concern for others in your children today. It will serve them well—and humanity as well—to get their attention off themselves for a while.

Promises of God to the Faithful

Note the words, "the children" which are emphasized, meaning your physical children - not spiritual children.

"Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with THY children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the Lord thy God." Deuteronomy 12:28.

"But thus saith the Lord, Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away, and the prey of the terrible shall be delivered: for I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save THY children." Isaiah 49:25.

"Fear thou not: for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isaiah 41:10.

"And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of THY children." Isa. 54:13.

"Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed, for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isa. 41:10.

"There is no king saved by the multitude of an host: a mighty man is not delivered by much strength. An horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by his great strength. Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy. To deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine. Our soul waiteth for the Lord: he is our help and our shield. For our heart shall rejoice in him, because we have trusted in his holy name. Let thy mercy O Lord, be upon us, according as we hope in thee." Psalm 33:16-22.

"Wait on the Lord and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it. I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and lo, he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright for the end of that man is peace. But the transgressors shall be destroyed together: the end of the wicked shall be cut off. But the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord: He is their strength in the time of trouble. And the Lord shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him." Psalm 37:34-40.

“Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him. For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and he shall save the souls of the needy,. He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence; and precious shall their blood be in his sight.” Psalm 72:11-14.

“He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust. Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence. He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust; His truth shall be thy shield and buckler. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee. Only with thine eyes shall thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.

Because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling. For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone. Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet. Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my name. He shall call upon me and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him. With long life will I satisfy him, and shew him my salvation.” Psalm 91:1-16

The Destruction of the “City” of Babylon

“And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.” Rev. 14:8.

Before the Second Advent Babylon is going to fall. The present economic system will crash. What should God’s people be doing at that time?

“Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.” Rev. 14:12.

Warnings are coming frequently, especially on the Internet, that “the end is nigh.” This man-made city (economic system) will be destroyed. The present economic/financial system will go. Read Revelation 18, noting that this will occur before the second coming. Jesus tells us, “Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching.”

This paper started by referring to warnings! Noah was a person who took heed to a warning.

“By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith.” Heb.

Note here that Noah made preparations before the disaster struck. But none outside his family did! Jesus said, “As in the days of Noah, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be.” Few will even consider the warnings. Look at the following warnings. Are you taking heed?

“For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect’s sake those days shall be shortened.” Matt 24:21.

“Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken; and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great shout of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.” Matt 24:29.

“Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob’s trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him: But they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them.” Jer. 30:7.

This is no “fun time.” There is no “rapture” Scofield-style out of this! It is a case of the “wicked” being separated from amongst the just. As Jesus said: “So shall it be at the end of the world (age); the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just. And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.” Matt 13:49.

Consider again the days of Noah. “But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.” Matt 24:37.

Noah had a different life-style. Noah took heed! He made preparations! After the crisis was over, where was Noah found? He was found on earth, not in an outer space “heaven.” Where will the Kingdom of Heaven be found? It will be found on earth! We live in an age where the whole fabric of civilization could crumble very quickly. Jesus warns us of coming time of trouble, as in Matt. 24:21 above. He told us about the signs of the times! Before the Second Advent we are advised of great fear in the earth.

“And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; Men’s hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.” Luke 21:25.

“For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places.” Matt 24:7.

We have the earthquakes, H-bugs, wars and all these things in sight! We have the threat of an Internet crash; a crash that could bring down all world trade. In effect, the latter would bring down that “great city” called Babylon. What then for God’s people. Revelation (18:20) tells us to rejoice. In the interval there is a tough time. Knowing something of what is coming warns us to be prepared. Only the righteous shall inherit the Earth! The greatest disaster of all for God’s people will be to be found taking heed to warnings, and to be not walking with God. So when is the time we should be heeding all these warnings? It is before the sun and moon are darkened, a time Jesus said is coming.

“While the sun, or the light or the moon, or the stars, not be darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain: In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened, And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low; Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high, and fears shall be in the way; and the almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.end.

“Isn’t it a coincidence that governments everywhere want to educate children. Government education, in turn, is supposed to be evidence of the state’s goodness and its concern for our well-being. The real explanation is less flattering. If the government’s propaganda can take root as children grow up, those kids will be no threat to the state apparatus. They’ll fasten the chains to their own ankles.”

WHY DID FDR PROVOKE JAPAN TO ATTACK AMERICA?

by Martha Barley

www.lewrockwell.com/2015/03/bionic-mosquito/the-pearl-harbor-myth/

I have many favorite websites to read on a daily basis and one of them is lewrockwell.com. On March 8, 2015, he reprinted a review of the book, The Pearl Harbor Myth: Rethinking the Unthinkable by Victor George. Now I have not read that book, but one part of the review really caught my attention. The reviewer is Bionic Mosquito and I do not know who that is. It is the only name given. He said this:

“Victor goes into some background of the U.S. involvement in the war well before December 7. He outlines the aid to the allies in Europe. He goes into detail regarding attempts to get Germany to shoot first. When this failed, the U.S. changed its focus to Japan. These actions have been well-documented elsewhere—termination of trade treaties, embargoes of material and the like. The big blow was the oil embargo.

His military advisors were strongly against the embargo, rightly anticipating that this would lead to war with Japan. Yet Roosevelt went ahead with the embargo in the summer of 1941—abruptly reversing his prior position. At the same time, he took other measures within days of the embargo decision: freezing Japan’s U.S. assets, breaking off diplomatic talks with Japan, and arming the Philippines.

Something happened at this time to get Roosevelt to change so abruptly and go against his military advisors. Victor cites historian Waldo Heinrichs with a “unique idea.” Roosevelt changed his attitude about pressuring Japan in order to save the Soviet Union. Germany had just invaded Russia, and Japan was contemplating when and how to support its German ally. Roosevelt was aware of these Japanese deliberations and preparations—Japan would make war plans for both the Soviet Union and the United States, but would only fight one of them. Victor believes it is quite credible that Roosevelt abruptly changed his approach and became more provocative with Japan for the purpose of reducing the risk that Japan attacks the Soviet’s.”

I don’t know about you, but in all my study of WWII information, I had never heard that “unique idea” before. To me this idea makes total sense when you understand that FDR wanted the Soviet Union as our ally even though it was a communist nation. Sadly, the author of the book is a strong supporter of FDR in spite of this type of information.

THE INCREDIBLE DISAPPEARING MAN

Of course you all know of Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn. Who doesn’t? Legendary Russian dissident during the Soviet era, prisoner in the gulags, starved, tortured, ostracized. But never broken. He spoke truth to power like few have ever done. His novels such as The Gulag Archipelago, The First Circle and Cancer Ward were not only brilliant literature but offered the rarest of insights into the life of a dissident in the USSR. He came to be regarded as one of the most eminent writers and philosophers of his age, which contributed to his being awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1970 “for ethical force with which he has pursued the indispensable traditions of Russian literature.”

Feted wherever he went, his books became international best-sellers, translated into dozens of languages, the world was at his feet. Then almost overnight it all stopped. He became a non-person. The transformation was virtually unprecedented in the field of literature. Why did this happen? Because Alex stepped on the Third Rail. Well, he didn’t so much step on it, rather dived on it full length. You see he wrote a book called 200 Years Together that traced the Jews’ colourful relationship with the Russian people and especially their role in the Bolshevik Revolution and its murderous tyranny.

He didn’t pull his punches. He placed Soviet Jews centre place in perpetrating the worst mass murders of the 20th century. While acknowledging that some Jews also suffered under this tyranny he clarified that it was not as Jews per se, rather that they were in the wrong faction at the wrong time. Solzhenitsyn's own estimate for the number of Christians (his word) who died was 60 million. He documented all of this in meticulous detail ... names, dates, times. But he did something else, something more insidious and dangerous. Something that had strategic international consequences for the Tribe. For a start he shone a light on the extraordinary Jewish capacity to magic themselves into a position of victimhood irrespective of their actual accountability. This in turn depended on — as he pointedly noted — their uncanny ability to seize control of media outlets. “There are pages of this history which one does not open without trembling. And these are the pages that are systematically and purposefully eradicated from the consciousness of the Jews.”

Other observations that cut to the bone included their practice of manipulating the legal framework to reflect Jewish interests (think “hate” legislation). “Russian people are now confronted by a Jew both as their judge and hangman. Why was it that anyone who had the misfortune to fall into the hands of the Cheka could count with high probability on standing before a Jewish investigator or being shot by a Jew?” He meticulously debunked Jewish writers who sought to portray Soviet Jews as having no choice in what they did. ‘Just following orders’ How ironic is that? He carefully traces the ways in which Jews, both within the USSR and internationally, favoured and supported Jewish interests under the cloak of universalistic altruism. Sound familiar?

I haven't even begun to describe what he wrote in 200 Years Together not least because I haven't read it, only certain chapters. So why have I not read it? Aha, therein lies a tale! You see, Solzhenitsyn's legendary status and guarantee of vast sales would in normal circumstances have had international publishers slaving at the prospect of getting their hands on the rights. But none did. None wanted it. It was never published in the West. In fact, incredible as it seems it has never been formally translated into English (Where's Victor Marsden when you need him?)! Given that English translations exist for almost every half-assed writing in the most obscure of languages the disappearance of 200 Years Together is mind-blowing. The author himself became a non-person as he had in the USSR.

Think about it. It is, as I said, mind-blowing. What sort of pressure could have resulted in every Western publishing house, every Western TV company, every Western magazine being intimidated into passing up such a unique and hugely profitable publishing coup? How exactly was this Jewish power exercised? Was it overt, subtle, physical, financial..... or what? It truly is frightening.

Is it any wonder that the American armed forces were afraid of commemorating the attack on the USS Liberty? Or that the country's so-called legislators should prostrate themselves before their true rulers in the sight of all?

[200 Years Together is on Amazon.com but only in Russian for $84]

“You must understand, the leading Bolsheviks who took over Russia were not Russians. They hated Russians. They hated Christians. Driven by ethnic hatred they tortured and slaughtered millions of Russians without a shred of human remorse. It cannot be overstated. Bolshevism committed the greatest human slaughter of all time. The fact that most of the world is ignorant and uncaring about this enormous crime is proof that the global media is in the hands of the perpetrators.” --- Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn -- check out:

MOVING THE ANCIENT BOUNDARIES

by Andrea Schwartz

“Do not move the ancient landmark that your fathers have set.” Proverbs 22:28.

Mankind has always been faced with a choice: either accept God's terms (and His definitions of terms), or construct independent and self-serving ones. When a culture constructs new ways of referring to Biblical concepts, it is evidence that it is in active rebellion against God and its laws and conduct will reflect such rebellion. When the people of God succumb to altered definitions and modern adjustments to God's Word, the results are detrimental and decidedly wicked. What's more, issues that are clear-cut in the Bible and clearly defined in Scripture become muddled and unnecessarily complex.

In the law of God as given to Moses and fulfilled (put into force) by Jesus, certain behaviours are deemed capital offences. This means that God requires the death penalty to be imposed by the civil government on people who commit those crimes. In addition to the justice demanded by God for these crimes, the death penalty also purges evil from among the people. Yet in our day and age, due to antinomian compromise within the church and outright humanism in the secular world, we have replaced Biblical terms with euphemistic ones and compounded the problem by inserting the concept of “mitigating circumstances” to areas where the Scripture speaks plainly and clearly.

An example of this is the term “fornication.” In Scripture this refers to and umbrellas many sexual behaviours that are outside the bounds of godly, covenant marriage between and man and a woman. R.J. Rushdoony notes:

“In proverbs, all extra-marital sexuality is condemned, and the counsels concerning the evils of prostitution, adultery, and pre-marital sexuality are all given as age-old wisdom and implicit in God's Law. Marital chastity is declared to be the standard (Prov. 5:1-23). It is presented, not as an impoverishing life, but as a well-spring of joy and health to man's being.”¹

Some like to posit a different set of rules under the New Covenant. There is no Biblical basis for this antinomian perspective.

“The New Testament forbade all non-marital sexual intercourse, and pre-marital relations therefore as well, without any concern other than to restate the Biblical Law for Greek and Roman converts (Acts 15:20, 29; 21:25; Rom. 1:29, 1 Cor 5:1; 6:13, 18; 7:2). Jesus forbade the thoughts leading to it (Matt. 5:28).

Clearly then, Biblical Law is designed to create a familistic society, and the central social offense is to strike at the life of the family. Adultery is thus placed on the same level as murder, in that it is a murderous act against the central social institution of a healthy culture.”²

Clearly then, Biblical Law is designed to create a familistic society, and the central social offense is to strike at the life of the family. Adultery is thus placed on the same level as murder, in that it is a murderous act against the central social institution of a healthy culture.”²

As adultery requires the death penalty under God's Law, so too do other specific acts of fornication: rape, homosexuality, and incest. But today these transgressions of the law are given euphemisms in our modern culture. Adultery is sanitized to "having an affair." Rape has lost much of its meaning due to promiscuity being the norm rather than the exception [nowadays usually referred to as "sexual assault"], not to mention how in some circles, any act of sex between a man and a woman is deemed rape depending on the mindset of the woman.³ And, words such as "gay" and "queer" have replaced the term homosexual that is used in Scripture. Parents or parent-figures are said to have molested or abused their children—terms not found in Scripture—rather than having committed incest with them and by extension adultery against their spouse if they are married. Add to this the societal conditioning, where perjury is expected, yet rarely prosecuted, not to mention that the death penalty is all but extinct (but required for perjury in a capital crime case, as well). Is it any wonder that within and without the church there seems to be no end of the reports of gross sexual misconduct? In truth, the people of God often prove helpless in separating the fact from the fiction and have no inkling as to how to apply God's Law to these situations.

Martin Selbrede notes that for certain transgressions of God's Law (covered under the term "abuse"), "Any number more than zero is one too many."⁴ He states:

"There are as many kinds of abuse as there are sinful impulses in the heart of man. Physical, emotional, spiritual, sexual, and ecclesiastical abuse must never be depersonalised or smeared with the vocabulary of collusion. Where abuse has in fact occurred, it must be dealt with in a godly way. Ezekiel 34 can help us grasp the manifold facets of such abuse and harm that can be inflicted on one or more sheep ...

If we fail to take God's oath seriously, and move to retain individuals in capacities where the harm they inflicted can be repeated, we will have placed ourselves firmly on the side of injustice. Small wonder that the modern church is filled with the walking wounded ... Deut 16:20 reads "Justice, justice shalt thou do," not "Injustice, injustice shalt thou preserve and protect."⁵

Since the operative nature of God's Law is ignored by most people and churches, and is not customarily the subject of Sunday sermons, it is easy to let standards other than Biblical ones rule the day. Uninformed or partially informed comments on social media often determine the guilt or innocence of the accused or accuser. Emotionalism and slander replace solid Biblical thinking. Even those who claim to adhere to theonomic principles are likely to abandon them in order to spare themselves or their congregations embarrassment or condemnation.

If we are serious about wanting to protect children, women, and society from sexual predators, we need to teach children (at home and in church) from the earliest age what God has to say on the subject of lawful sexuality. Some will protest that this instruction will sexualize children prematurely, but failing to teach them leaves them fair game for perpetrators and aggressors. Better that they become acquainted with these matters from those who will provide instruction from a thoroughly Biblical perspective, than from someone without the same interest and concern for them.

It is always preferable to provide instruction before problems arise when the terms and context of the teaching can be done calmly and systematically. Those whose families have been ravaged by sexual violations often agree with this statement in hindsight. Although the following examples are hardly of the same magnitude of teaching children how to obey God in the area of sexuality, they illustrate the point that we regularly address the reality of potentially negative outcomes as we prepare our children for scenarios they may encounter.

- When a family is planning a wilderness vacation or a simple hike, instruction is given to children to be on the lookout for poison ivy and poison oak. The plants are described and they are schooled in how to spot them before they are standing in the midst of them. One could argue that by pointing these out to children ahead of time they will go and seek out the plants and play there. However, by calling their attention to the hazards posed by even touching them, unnecessary pain and suffering can be avoided.

- When teaching young people to drive, we encourage the concept of defensive driving. By demonstrating the devastating effects of collision injuries or even death, and encouraging the frequent and proper use of mirrors, speed limits, and safe driving practices, we help a new driver maneuver through the hazards associated with getting behind the wheel. Rarely do these precautions dissuade the teen from driving altogether. Just the opposite is the case. The person is better equipped to deal with the inevitable challenges that will be faced each time they assume the role of a driver.

WHILE THEIR HEARTS ARE TENDER

Very young children are often the target of sexual predators (both within and without the church). Their trusting natures and their eagerness to please give an advantage to those who see to harm them. We do not have to "toughen" the tender hearts of children to prevent them from becoming victims. We can speak to their tender hearts as we teach God's rules and show that God's laws are operative even for children. So, as we instruct children on modesty (not running around without clothes on), and respecting the personal spaces and bodies of others (not solving their differences by coming to blows), we can also teach that because of God's high premium on marriage and fidelity, care must be taken to remain in His will long before a person is ready for marriage.

Discussing why we cover certain parts of our body and guard our chastity is a way sin (the opposite of godliness) and its effects can be explained to children. If you teach them when they are young, they have the principle in place before they experience temptation in these areas. If they understand that mommy and daddy have an exclusive relationship with each other that does not include other people, and that the same rules apply to them even before they marry, red flags will go up if something contrary to Biblical teaching is offered to them.

Because of the epidemic of adults fornicating with children, it is important that we refine our terms so that gullible children are not fooled by "friendly" people who come bearing treats or presents. The familiar admonition, "Don't talk with strangers," implies that the only true threats come from people they don't know. However, once someone has been introduced and seen on a regular basis, the designation of stranger no longer applies. Instead, children should be told that secrecy from their parents is never an acceptable condition when dealing with others. Someone who wishes to take advantage of children will usually encourage secrecy and instruct them not to speak to others about any

Exposing a false doctrine WHO THE DEVIL IS SATAN? by Francis Christen

Christians in general are rank idolators with respect to the First Commandment in that they almost universally believe in this so-called "Satan" (bad god) whose position is to counter-balance their other so-called good god. Both of the gods of the typical Judeo-Christian Church lack of what takes place. Whether they are seduced by pleasure or intimidated by fear, if children have not been prepared to recognize a sinful situation, defend themselves, and report it to their parents, then their vulnerability is a direct result of parental negligence, at best.

Biblical validation.

In the devastating scenario of a parent abusing his or her own son or daughter, the non-offending parent must remember that Biblically the responsibility and loyalty is first and foremost to God, and then to protect the child. Attempting to handle revelations of sexual misconduct privately and without outside assistance compounds the problem and makes discovering the truth or falsity of the claim additionally difficult.

Biblical definitions and Biblical consequences must be taught and understood if we hope to bring light to this very dark area. We must use the Biblical terms for these specific acts of fornication: adultery, incest, rape, and homosexuality. Trying to soften these terms only serves to lessen the fact that the acts are primarily offenses against God, and that His Word contains the consequences for so doing.

Among the problems attendant with this entire subject is the absence of Biblical terms to replace the concepts of abuse and molestation. As we've moved away from Biblical definitions, the waters get muddier and muddier. Moreover, some want to dismiss any allegation by a child or teen if there are no corroborating witnesses.⁶ While it is true that it takes wisdom to adjudicate in these matters,⁷ without people who place God's Law above personal considerations or public opinion, we don't have a fighting chance.

The Bible is not silent regarding those who don't have corroborating witnesses to sexual offenses perpetrated against them. Psalm 10:2-11 describes the plea of the oppressed person. Most definitely, those who are victimized by the sexual aggression of others fall into the category of the oppressed. Note how well the psalmist describes the actions of the wicked as they go after the weak and helpless.

"2 In arrogance the wicked hotly pursue the poor; let them be caught in the schemes that they have devised. 3 For the wicked boasts of the desires of his soul, and the one greedy for gain curses and renounces the Lord. 4 In the pride of his face the wicked does not seek him; all his thoughts are, 'There is no God.' 5 His ways prosper at all times; your judgments are on high, out of his sight; as for his foes, he puffs at them. 6 He says in his heart, 'I shall not be moved; throughout all generations I shall not meet adversity.' 7 His mouth is filled with cursing and deceit and oppression; under his tongue are mischief and iniquity.

8 He sits in ambush in the villages; in hiding places he murders the innocent. His eyes stealthily watch for the helpless; 9 he lurks in ambush like a lion in his thicket; he lurks that he may seize the poor when he draws him into his net. 10 The helpless are crushed, sink down, and fall by his might. 11 He says in his heart, 'God has forgotten, he has hidden his face, he will never see it.'"

PROPER JURISDICTION

Failing to acquaint children with the tactics and strategies of those who might oppress them leaves them at a decided disadvantage when it comes to protection. We must insist that our children tell us immediately of anything untoward that happens to them. This policy protects both the accused and the accuser so that steps can be taken to investigate the matter and bring in the civil authorities to help adjudicate the truth or falsehoods of the claims. Anything less subverts justice (one way or the other) and creates a shadow-world of secrecy.

Some object to calling in civil authorities, stating that the ungodly status quo disqualifies the civil realm from dealing with such accusations and crimes. This argument fails on many counts, not the least of which is the God-given jurisdiction for justice God gives to the state. If we are going to call into question instances of overreach by one institution into the affairs of others (health, education, and welfare), we must uphold the proper duties of the civil magistrate.

Others call it a matter for the church to deal with. This, again, fails because the church does not wield the sword and for this reason must bring in the civil authorities to determine whether allegations of sexual violation have occurred. The church has the power of excommunication, which may be in order for the offender, but that in and of itself does not bring about justice for the offended. We must make proper use of the institution God has ordained to deal with such matters, even if it exercises its role imperfectly. This should be the impetus for God's people to work toward the Christian reconstruction of society so that we end up with a godly civil realm.⁸

LIABILITY OF THE BYSTANDER

Along with training children to be forthright with their parents (or another adult in the case of an offending parent), the person who becomes aware of the situation of sexual violation has a responsibility to aid the afflicted. Rushdoony notes:

"This principle of responsibility appears in Deuteronomy 22:24. A woman assaulted in a city is presumed to have given consent if she does not raise a cry, the origin of the hue and cry common law. At her cry, every man within sound of her voice has a duty to render immediate aid; failure to do so was regarded as a fearful abomination which polluted the land, and figuratively, darkened the sun."⁹

Not unlike in the parable of the Good Samaritan, we must render aid when we are approached by an oppressed or afflicted person. We cannot fall back on the fact that we're too busy or we are uncertain as to the truth or falsity of the claim. We are not to be a bystander to the situation, but must help to bring about justice. Again Rushdoony comments:

"The civil legal situation may be an equivocal one; the biblical legal requirement is not. Misprision, i.e. the concealment of a crime, is a serious offense. The inactive bystander is a party to the crime. The parable of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:29-37) was firmly based on biblical law.

In the parable of the Good Samaritan, the priest and the Levite avoided the victim and "passed by on the other side." The religious leaders claimed to obey the law; they tithed "mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God" (Luke 11:42). It was an easy matter to tithe the mint; it sometimes required moral courage to help a victim; in the case of the victim Jesus described, not even courage was required, only assistance in terms of the law to a victim abandoned by the criminals. The religious leaders kept the law only when it cost them little or nothing to do so. Jesus confounded them from the law.

It is thus a serious error to reduce the parable of the Good Samaritan to the level of feeling alone, or to a matter of charity; these things are subordinate to the law in this case. Those who despise the law are also without charity. They profess to love the law, but they choose simple matters for obedience and despise the things which are difficult. Too many churchmen today reduce the law to simple rules about the sabbath and adultery and bypass or violate the rest of the law with impunity. This is Pharisaism.”¹⁰

Although no one enjoys conflict, there are times when unpleasant accusations need to be dealt with scripturally. Unless the people of God adhere to God’s Word in the area of sexuality, they will not be able to deal with the ugly situations that a wicked and perverse generation presents us with. We represent Jesus the Anointed as Christians and need to understand that the psalmist is calling us to insist on justice—justice on God’s terms.

“O Lord, you hear the desire of the afflicted; you will strengthen their heart; you will incline your ear to do justice to the fatherless and the oppressed, so that man who is of the earth may strike terror no more.” (Psalm 10:17-18).**

THINK BEFORE YOU INK

by Janet Treadway

Recently I watched a news clip about Dr. Jon Mendelsohn at Advanced Cosmetic Surgery and Laser Center. He was using his skills as a plastic surgeon to remove unwanted tattoos from convicted criminals who had just been released from prison. It’s a mission he hopes will help these men live better lives.

Two of his clients, Michael and Leroy, have served time behind bars. Michael was sentenced on drug charges. Leroy’s criminal record began when he was 12. Now 31, he’s been locked up for more years than he’s been free. Leroy realized that the tattoos made it harder for him to get a job.

Both former convicts are now fathers, and they realized that to get a job they had to remove the tattoos. They also wanted to be a better example to their children, so now they are having them removed.

We often make our decisions on the spur of the moment, based on our emotions at the time or peer pressure, instead of considering how this will affect us down the road or how it will look on our changing bodies. Will this person whose name I want to tattoo on me be in my life 20 years from now?

In making a decision, consider how you will feel about it years later. Here are three factors to think about in considering a decision, particularly when it comes to tattoos.

Will You Regret the Decision Later?

The number of people who regret getting tattoos while a teen or a young adult is on the rise, according to a survey reported in London’s Daily Mail (Naomi Greenaway, “Do You Regret Your Tattoo? One in Six People Hate Theirs and 50% Regret Getting Inked Because It Makes Them Look Common,” April 1, 2014).

The article noted that “one in six hate their tattoos so much they want them surgically removed” and that “the most prevalent reason for the change of heart is fear of the so-called ‘tramp stamps,’ as fifty percent worry they will be considered ‘common [and] uncultured.’”

What seemed so cool years ago is not so cool for them now. Even several well-known celebrities claim they now regret their tattoos. More than a third of those surveyed “express regret for fear of how they’ll look as they get older (and saggier), and half of those surveyed admitted that a person with prominent tattoos was less likely to succeed in business.”

The article also noted the following: “Perceived promiscuity is also a worry for the tattooed masses. One in six of those surveyed said people with tattoos are seen as more likely to have one-night-stands.”

Three celebrity music artists who are judges in the weekly television singing competition show The Voice have regrets of being inked. In 2012 Pharrell Williams told Complex magazine that he was “young and dumb” when he got his tattoos and is currently going through the painful process of having them removed.

Adam Levine can’t stand the tattoo on his right shoulder that was supposed to be a cool Russian heritage symbol. Instead he now thinks it looks more like a “cauliflower with a sun in the middle of it.”

Blake Shelton, another judge on The Voice, considers his tattoo of deer tracks—which he got to represent his love of hunting—ugly and stupid, mostly because the tracks are “constantly mistaken for lady bugs.” All three now have regrets. So ask yourself, Will I regret it later? Will it be worth the cost and pain to remove it?

How Will It Affect The Image You Want to Present?

What image do markings on your body reflect to others? How might it affect your job and career? How might it affect your children? According to an article titled: “How Tattoos Affect Your Career” at Salary.com, a survey of 2,700 people found that 76 percent felt that tattoos and piercings hurt an applicant's chances of being hired for a job. Dr. Andrew Timming of St. Andrews University School of Management interviewed recruiters in 14 organizations, including a hotel, bank, city council, prison, university and bookseller, to get a broad view of their opinions on tattoos. He found that most respondents agreed that visible tattoos are a stigma.

And think about this: While you might think it's cool to have a tattoo, the most surprising finding of the survey reported in the Daily Mail earlier is that when it comes to romance, a tattoo can be a turn-off—even to people who have them! A third of those surveyed said they would be less likely to date someone with prominent tattoos.

So ask yourself: What kind of image do I want to project? Will this affect me in job hunting or my plans for my future career? And will my tattoos be a turn-off in regards to courting and future relationships?

Does It Glorify God?

Above all, will your decision whether to sport a tattoo reflect God and His values and character? We need to remember that He is holy and pure and wants us to be also. God commanded His nation of Israel, "You shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor tattoo any marks on you; I am the Lord" (Leviticus 19:28).

The Apostle Paul reminds us that our body is meant to be the temple of God holy spirit and that it does not belong to us but was bought at the price of Jesus' blood when He died for us, so we are to glorify God in our body (1 Cor. 6:19-20). Whatever we do should reflect and glorify Him.

Is your body consistent with the importance you attach to your life as God's creation and the intended dwelling place of His spirit? We are to represent God (Matthew 5:14; 1 Peter 2:9, 12). Our worship of and service to Him are far more important than anything else we do. Do we give others that distinct impression by our appearance, or do we send a very different message?

While we strive with God's help to be clean and pure on the inside, this should affect how we present ourselves on the outside. Will you be a good representative for God's way of life starting with your appearance? Or when people see you coming, will they be turned off?

Think therefore before you decide to tattoo your body. A vital key to making wise decisions is to consider the consequences! Every single decision you have ever made or will ever make has consequences, whether good or bad. Don't follow the crowd! Have courage to be your own person and be proud of it! You can do that without having to tattoo your body.

Ask yourself these three crucial questions: Will you regret the decision later? How will it affect the image you want to present? Does it glorify God - or disobey His Law?

If you already got one or more tattoos before now, you shouldn't feel like you have to have them removed to have a deep relationship with God (although they should be covered or removed if they promote something offensive, vulgar or demonic). You are very special to God and the person you are on the inside is what most concerns Him.

This article is aimed at those who might be thinking about getting tattoos now or in the future, and isn't meant to condemn those who already have them. More broadly it is aimed at all young people who read this in hope that they will think before they ink!

CHINA HAS MORE SUBS THAN U.S. NAVY

China's Navy now has a submarine fleet larger than that of the United States, a U.S. admiral said on February 25. "Their submarine force has grown over a tremendous rate," Vice Adm. Joseph Mulloy told the House Armed Service Committee's Seapower and Projection Forces Subcommittee. "They now have more diesel and nuclear attack submarines than we have, so they've passed us in total quantity."

The U.S. Navy has 71 commissioned submarines, and experts say China's fleet now numbers at least in the low 70s, though the precise number is unpublished and the quality of the submarines is known to be inferior. However, that is changing.

"They are producing some fairly amazing submarines," Mulloy said. "They've now had three deployments in the Indian Ocean. They are expanding where their submarines go. We know they are out experimenting and working and operating and certainly want to be in the world of advanced submarines."

As Beijing's military build-up continues and the nation develops strong ties with oil-rich Russia, watch for smaller Asian nations to rally around this Asian hegemon.

GIMME THAT OLD-TIME RELIGION

by Ed Sommerville

I well remember singing that old song when I was in the church as a young boy. I'm sure that everyone reading this is very familiar with it as well. It's time we took a good look at those words and what they imply. The "religion" founded on Jesus the Anointed was not a religion but a way of life, simply called The Way.

At the time of the apostles it had already been penetrated by the new religion called Judaism, that was founded about 200 BC in Babylon. Our Lord warned about that happening too many times to mention. At the time of Jesus the Edomites, the descendants of Esau had enough power over the Israelites that one of their own, Herod, was the king of Judea. We find this same thing happening in America at this time. This same antichrist religion now controls our congress, our media, the Federal Reserve, all government agencies, write the oppressive and tyrannical laws that are given to Congress to pass, as well as our education system and our Hollywood movies that determines the values, morals and opinions of our youth, as well as adults.

In reading the New Testament, you can plainly see that the apostles had very little problems with the Roman Empire as many of them were killed by the ones that are now called God's 'chosen people.' Simon Magus, a contemporary of the apostles played a big role in changing the early church. It was he, not Peter, that went to Rome and took along two keys that play a big part in the forming of the Universal Church, later to become the Catholic Church. He was buried on Vaticanus Hill, which now is the place of the Vatican. The two keys are still displayed on the coat of the Pope. Claudius Caesar regarded Simon so highly that he had a statue of him erected along the Tibor River.

I have an old book, The Two Babylons, by A. Hislop (#907 @ $44.45), published in 1916 that compares the old religion of Babylon to that of the Christianity at his time, and it has changed for the worse since then. I never realized that so much of today's Christianity had its roots in ancient Babylon and even Greek mythology. A rabbi in defining Christianity today, said, Its a little bit Jewish and a whole lot pagan. Although this may sound offensive, it is somewhat true.

It wasn't till the time of the great reformation that a few of these erroneous doctrines were purged from the newly formed denominations. Unfortunately many still remained, and what Paul referred to as heresies have now become orthodox, like they existed in his time. If you feel that the old time religion refers to "The Way" as taught by Jesus and the apostles, it would not be good enough for you, as it could be regarded as a cult today.

Now let's move ahead to early America in the 17th and 18th centuries. This was at the time they had the Geneva Bible to read and study for themselves. They could tell by the prophets that they were the predestined ones that occupied the land as described by Joseph and the prophets. They did not accept the two pagan holidays that deceitfully took on the pretence of being Christian in origin. They were not to take Christmas off work to observe it. It was not till 1850 that the first Christmas tree made its appearance in our White House. At that time God's Law was regarded as a pattern for our common law that was not in conflict with His. Because of their deep regard for His perfect law of liberty there was no city in America with a police force till 1850. We had a Christianity in those golden years that bears no resemblance to the form of Godliness that now passes as Christianity. All one has to do is read the true history of those years and their faith that overcame extreme adversities along with the price they paid for the freedoms we once had.

In the last half of the 18th century the faith of early America began to change and we now have a "religion" that is completely alien to the faith of our fathers. Our faith no longer wants independence but dependence, no longer Be ye separate, but integrate. The new and deceptive doctrines that emerged rapidly in the 20th century that were never found by the great theologians of the past and are not grounded in the Word, now dominate the minds of Christians to the point that they have become apathetic and useless to slow our rapid decline into debt, immorality and tyranny. This is not an opinion but a fact.

I would be remiss if I did not mention that grand old hymn, Faith of our Fathers, which is still sung by (some of) today's Christians as though they believed it. However if one was to explain to them that without all the contemporary doctrines that have become the centerpiece in many of our churches and preached as truth, they would not accept the faith of our fathers as that is not the faith that builds larger churches; along with all the things that a "successful" church should be today.

By their fruits, ye shall know them. I am well aware if the fruits of the Old Time religion and the faith of our fathers. The very faith, which with God's help created the greatest Christian nation on earth with freedom that never before existed in any country on earth. I can also see the fruits of the new Christianity created by the Zionist Scofield Bible in the 20th century that has stood by and watched our morals, economy and freedoms vanish. You are now faced with a choice, Choose ye this day. Which Christianity do you prefer? The one that built this nation that was once the most beloved nation on earth, or the one that has helped turn it into a most immoral, Godless, brutal and feared nation with very little freedom left?

It has gotten to the point that anyone like myself who believes in the faith of our fathers and does not accept the new approved religion of today, is regarded as an outcast by family and friends.

For anyone today that regards themselves as a Christian, it would be the ultimate example of hypocrisy to sing these songs, as the Old Time Religion and the Faith of our Fathers is no longer good enough for them. Even those still singing Psalms find them being rewritten every so many years, as the old words are considered out-of-date.

Truth is never determined by a majority!

STANDING ON THE PROMISES OF GOD

by Ed Sommerville

By spending the first forty-five years of my life in the Baptist church, I can well remember singing that old hymn. Although I haven't heard it in years, I'm sure it is still popular in many churches.

Now when I hear that song I wonder just what promises are today's Judeo-Christians standing on and what ones do they reject. Since the Bible from Genesis to Revelation was written only to His people Israel, there are many promises made to them only. I will mention a few of the scores of prophecies or promises made to Israel.

- Abraham's seed was promised to be like the sand of the sea that could never be measured or numbered, and Rebecca was promised to be the mother of thousands of millions. Where are these people today?

- Abraham was promised to be the father of many nations, and not just one antichrist nation, as believed today. Since we are now rapidly approaching the end of this age, where are these nations today?

- Jesus promised that His sheep would hear His voice and follow Him. Only Israel were ever called His sheep. Do you think the people you call Jews have heard His voice and followed Him for the last 2,000 years? Was He able to keep this promise?

- The prophet Nathan told David while standing in (old) Jerusalem, that Israel was to move to a new land in the future (1 Chr. 17:9, and 2 Sam. 7:10). Where is this new land?

Since none of the promises mentioned above have been fulfilled in the people called Jews today, are we to assume they were not valid or to be taken seriously? Which would mean that He did not know the end from the beginning.

There are so many prophecies or promises regarding Israel in this age that are completely ignored or concealed by the churches as they do not fit in with the Zionist approved hermeneutics and eschatology as promoted in our seminaries that teach the Universalism and Diversity, that is destroying our White Christian European race. The only people on earth that have followed Him for the last 2,000 years.

It sure makes me wonder just what promises our pastors feel are alright to stand on.

FIVE QUESTIONS SAME-SEX 'MARRIAGE' ADVOCATES REFUSE TO ANSWER

And by refuse to answer we mean they will either change the subject, change the question or offer an answer so irrelevant and stupid, you wonder who they're talking to.

- Question #1. If we redefine marriage to include two men or two women, can we also redefine it to mean one man and 4 women? What about one man and a 12-year-old child?

They will either accuse you of the "Slippery Slope" fallacy (which is only a fallacy if the slope is an unreasonable conclusion, which in this case, it's already happening) or they will claim children are unable to offer informed consent, and then call you a racist when you point out that they claim that same child can consent to an abortion. Truth is, many homosexual activists have made it clear that they want age-of-consent laws abolished. This is obviously bad PR, so the marketing people for the Gay Mafia has quieted down such demands, for now. So the real answer is, "Because we don't want to let people know that this is part of our long-term goal."

• Question #2. How will "allowing" same-sex marriage work without empowering the government to force states, counties, cities, businesses, churches and even individuals to accept it, against their will?

That is the question they ignore and generally offer a regurgitated chant that goes something like, "It's about equal rights. It's about equal protection. It's about poached eggs. It's about blehblehbleh." Anything to avoid actually answering the question asked. The truth is it's impossible to implement same-sex marriage without handing much more power to the government to do so. Pretending it's about "getting the government out of marriage" is complete nonsense, and we have more than enough evidence that those behind same-sex marriage want more government control over marriage, not less.

• Question #3. Since every single legal aspect of marriage can be duplicated between any two people using already existing legal measures, the battle for same-sex marriage boils down to nothing more than redefining the term "marriage" and the argument becomes, why would we refuse homosexuals the right to be "happy." Are you really saying that homosexuals are only happy when they are allowed to force society to redefine words (like "gay" and now "marriage")?

Again, this will cause them to spew the same regurgitated responses they do for question 2. I mean, it's like watching a frog jump when poked with a needle. Oh, they'll maybe throw in some pathetic mention of "separate but equal" but when you point out that using that argument means Black people can never achieve equality until they are allowed to call themselves White, they'll respond with—of course—an accusation of racism.

• Question #4. If homosexuals cannot achieve happiness unless they are allowed to redefine terms, isn't that rather a stark condemnation of the psychological well-being of homosexuals?

Be careful because this may actually cause their heads to explode. You'll definitely be called a lot of names as they search for some response in order to evade the raw, naked truth of this question. Homosexuality was only removed from the APA's list of mental disorders after the APA board was packed with pro-homosexual activists, making it a political decision, not a medical one. The pretense that homosexuality is not a mental disorder continues to this day, and has been "augmented" with the horrible myth that it's a lifelong condition that they can never, ever escape.

• Question #5. If a group of people declared that they can only be happy if they are allowed to redefine racial titles, allowing them to legally be recognized as any race they choose to declare themselves to be, would you favour allowing that? If not, why?

They'll of course, claim it's not the same thing, but they'll flounder trying to explain why it's not the same thing. But it is the exact same thing. I want to be considered Jewish so I'll have the government force all food manufacturers and restaurants to use the new definition of kosher, that includes all foods I like, but aren't actually kosher. It'll be about my freedom, after all. Aren't they doing this very same with gender? They are trying to force society to accept that a person's gender is whatever they say it is, at the moment, so get out of the way while we go watch your little girl in the bathroom, bigot.

Q. Brother Bob (McCurry): What do you consider the most serious problem facing us today? Great question! Simple answer:

"Their is no fear of God before the eyes of the people."
Rom. 3:18; "Every man does what is right in his own eyes." Judges 17:6.

MEMORY VERSES TO LEARN:

Years ago, we compiled a list of important verses for children to memorize, weekly. You might get your children to memorize these (over the next 4 weeks):

Isaiah 46:10-11	Psalm

OUR READERS SAY:

Hi Hank: I have deposited money into the CIM account for my newsletters. Thank you for all the great articles as always. The last newsletter was very handy given the latest government heavy handed handling of the vaccination issue. All the best and bless you for continuing to give us good information. Qld.

Dear Hank, Your April edition was great from start to finish, especially the first one by Chuck Kuhler. Things seem to be coming to a head now as so much is happening. It's hard to believe that our people could be as dumbed down as they now are. Keep up the good work. USA

Dear Hank: Hope you are staying healthy. Here is a new name for sending the Messenger to. Thanks. NZ

I was just informed that as from January, the last Australian BP refinery will close, and all our fuel will be imported from Indonesia—what a great country we live in, when nothing gets made here anymore, and everything is imported, and of course our money is exported. So how do we replace the money lost. Well, we have mining of course, as long as it lasts. I think politicians pay should be linked to Australian manufacture. As manufacture declines so should their remuneration. If they work hard to re-establish manufacturing everything we once used to make, then their pay will go up. Now they work to destroy the country while we pay them! They destroy jobs, then tell people to go find a job. That's lunacy. Without engineering industry (Holden & Ford, Sidchrome, and many, many others, etc) and without refineries for fuel, how could this country ever defend itself? We used to have shipbuilding, arms manufacturers, an aircraft industry etc. Boots and tools of good quality were made here - now what? China, Indonesia, & Vietnam!

God willing I will be away end of June to early July. So the July Messenger may be delayed. Thank you for your patience; and also for your ongoing support, orders and letters which are all appreciated. May the God of our forefathers bless you and keep you and make His face shine on you and grant you His peace, and keep you safe,
