"Blessed be the LORD God of Israel; For He hath visited and redeemed His people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; That we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our lives." HEAVEN OR HELL

by Pastor Don Elmore

As a young boy, I was taught that it was everyone in the world's destiny to go to either Heaven or Hell at death. My Judeo-Christian Church taught that those who believed that Jesus died for them went to Heaven and all those who didn't went to Hell. It was kind of a major choice—where are you going to spend eternity?

That church was Arminian in their theology. That means that Jesus the Anointed died for everyone, but it is only valid if one believes. God voted for you, the Devil cast his vote against you; and you must make the decision of where you are to spend eternity. I guess it would be a 2-1 majority vote.

Today's Christianity is somewhere close to this in their theology. It is Arminianism to the core and if you repeat a little prayer at the end of the sermon, then you are born again and will go to heaven when you die. Most don't actually say it, but their silence implies it: they will never lose it. What a great deal.

But then, while I was in the 5th grade, I learned that America's churches were not Arminian, but were Calvinistic. What was Calvinism? So I asked my teacher, "What did Calvin teach?"

My teacher answered: "God elected certain people to salvation. And those He elected He died for. And who He did not elect or choose were sent to Hell at their death. Salvation is of the Lord."

In my little 5th grade mind I thought, "That is the exact opposite of what my Baptist Church teaches; for in my church the person chooses salvation and in the main churches in the beginning of our nation, God chose people to salvation."

So I asked another question: "How does a person know if he is elected or not?"

My 5th grade woman teacher hesitantly answered: "I guess if you believe, then you were elected, and if you don't believe you weren't."

I asked no more questions. The lesson went on, but the question that I had asked went on for a much longer time. What was the question? Who was right, Arminianism or Calvinism?

When I was in my senior year at college, I was given a bunch of newspapers that were written by a Calvinistic preacher. From this preacher's writings, I learned that Calvinists taught the following T.U.L.I.P. doctrine:

- T: Total Depravity
- U: Unconditional election

- L: Limited Atonement
- I: Irresistible Grace
- P: Perseverance of the saints.

Calvinists taught that Jesus did not die for everyone (Limited Atonement). Jesus only died for those who He had elected. All of Adam's descendants were so depraved, after Adam's fall, that they were unable to choose God if they had to choose. God made the choice. And those who He chose, Jesus died for. And those who He died for, the Spirit would quicken and the person could never lose his salvation.

That took me back to the 5th grade. Who did God elect? The Calvinists said that there was a member of their church, who was a faithful member for over forty years, and who committed a terrible sin and was unrepentant, and as a result was excluded from their church membership—he was not elected although everyone thought that he had been. In other words, anyone who departed from the faith, was not elected. Only those who remained a true believer was elected.

But Calvinism, like Arminianism, is universal. God could choose anyone of any race to salvation; anyone of any race could choose God for salvation. The only difference was, Who did the choosing?

But what about a person who never heard of Jesus Christ, how could he be saved? And that is the majority of people in the world. What about the Canaanites that God ordered His covenant people to kill them all—men, women and children. Did Jesus die for them? What about Goliath? Did Jesus die for him too?

Then I discovered Christian Identity. But it has a lot of baggage carried over from the mainstream churches. Some were Calvinistic and some were Arminian. They didn't emphasize it very much, for I think they were as confused as I was. Some were even, of all things, universal!

Both Calvinism and Arminianism are wrong. God does NOT elect any one of any race to salvation; and any one of any race cannot choose God for salvation. Then what is correct? The Bible says that God elected His Covenant People—i.e. Israel.

In Jeremiah 3:8 we read: “And I saw, when for all the causes whereby BACKSLIDING Israel committed adultery I had put her away, and given her a bill of divorce; yet her TREACHEROUS sister Judah feared not, and went and played the harlot also.” The prophet Hosea explains it a little bit more that the House of Israel became cut off from the commonwealth of Israel, but it would not last forever. They would be grafted in at a later date.

Then I learned that the Bible talks not only of God's Covenant People, but of another seed that hates them and wants nothing more than to see them completely annihilated (hence their promotion of inter-racial marriage, which destroys the white race forever). They are the enemies of Israel. Why wasn't I told this in the Judeo-Christian church? They only think that the salvation they offer is important!

Then I discovered that the believers' eternal home would not be in Heaven, but would be on the EARTH ruling and reigning with Jesus the Anointed, our Kinsman Redeemer. So, at the birth of Jesus, we have the BIRTHRIGHT kingdom of the House of Israel in a state of divorcement and the SCEPTRE kingdom of Judah a remnant of which had returned to Palestine from Babylon. The House of Israel can't be the Scepter and the House of Judah can't be the Birthright. The House of Israel is scattered into Europe, Asia Minor and parts of Northern Africa. They can't do anything, because they are cut off from the covenant and its blessings.

Ephesians 2, tells of their situation of having “no hope, and without God in the world. But now in Christ Jesus ye who once were far off are made near by the blood of Anointing.” Israel is God's elect. But it is like Joshua said in his farewell speech to Israel: “... put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the (Euphrates) river, and in Egypt, and SERVE ye the LORD.” And they served the LORD, their God, until they died.

Blessed be the LORD God of Israel.

WHORLANDO CHANGES NOTHING

Pastor Mark Downey

“And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For everyone that does evil hates the light, neither comes to the light, lest his deeds should be exposed. But he doing the truth comes to the light, in order that his deeds would be made manifest because it is with God that they have been accomplished.” John 3:19-21.

A mongrel pervert and winner of this year's highest body count at a “gay” bar with an AR-15 has popped the bubble in a venue that has touted itself as “the happiest place on earth,” Orlando, Florida, home of Disney World, that has hosted a “gay pride” for many years. The word gay used to mean happy, but cultural Marxism has made sure to call good evil and evil good in this day and age of political correctness. (Actually, the word used by the sodomites is ‘Ghe’ which is pronounced ‘gay’ but is a Hebrew word, meaning proud and haughty, see Messenger #104 for Aug 1994, p.9 - it's on our website).

An unprecedented spotlight is now shining on what may be considered “the gayest place on earth” at least as far as political expediency and intrigue of the establishment oligarchy. One could just as easily change the name of the entertainment complex on steroids to Dismal World as a 2 year old toddler was snatched and killed by an alligator during the same week as “the Pulse” nightclub for perverts and mongrels, who staged a false flag operation, following a pattern of other sloppy crisis actors pretending to shock the public with gratuitous and preposterous violence better left to Hollywood and Disney films. But, a film of glazed vision blurs the sight of those who worship television and movies, the exclusive domain of antichrist jewry and the god Miramax. And God is not happy with communities that are trying their damndest to outdo Sodom and Gomorrah. Through all of this, rest assured, God is not mocked.

Another grim story in Whorlando is an assassination the day before the alleged shootout at the Pulse of Christina Grimmie, a singer/contestant on NBC's ‘The Voice,’ just 4 miles away. There are signs of the times for those with eyes to see. A deranged idolater of hers had the fantasy that they were going to get married, until he was told (erroneously) she already had a boyfriend. So he killed her and himself in a “no gun zone.” Ironically, it was after the concert she had with the group called ‘Before You Exit’ and a few weeks earlier posted a song on YouTube called ‘In Christ Alone,’ that preceded her death, with the lyrics: “No power of hell, no scheme of man, Can ever pluck me from His hand; Till He returns or calls me home.” She got the call. However, what we are not told about this self-professing Christian girl is that she whored herself out to Babylon for a successful singing career.

Here are two pictures showing the band giving the ‘devils horn’ and its logo in the background, the alchemical symbol for phosphorous, which is commonly associated with Lucifer in occult circles. And the young singer in an all-too-familiar ‘all-seeing-eye’ pose ala blue hair and the elven Evenstar necklace from Lord of the Rings, a symbol of immortality. Is this Christian?

Did she die in a ritual sacrifice as a precursor to the big event? I find her racial identity and her killer to be questionable, making the proposition of marriage or merging the holy (Christ) with the unholy (the antichrists) absurd. Another quirk is that she posted a song called 'Lean On' on June 11, 2015 exactly a year before she died; with the chorus "Blow a kiss, fire a gun" repeated 12 times.

This incident definitely has an odor. Her brother, shown here with a well-developed Hittite nose, tackled the shooter in which the gun discharged and again luckily eliminated the perpetrator from ever telling us anything at a trial. At a eulogy for his sister, he said, "She loved this town ... and she loved the Lord" and then lumped the dead faggots who no longer had a pulse with his sister/saint, saying "there was a huge tragedy to Orlando, to the LGBT community, and to the whole world." And then he asked for prayers, for the dead and their friends and family. The mayor of her home town chimed in, "Your heart can be empty because you can't see her or you can be full because of the love you shared You can cry and close your mind, be empty and turn your back, or you can do what she would want and smile and open your eyes, smile, love and go on." There seems to be a New Age virus that is a far cry from the agape love of Jesus, that of a higher duty to obey God, rather than man. Just put your head in a bucket of mud, while your home, community and nation are going to hell. Just for the record Mr. Mayor, "Faith is ... the evidence of things not seen" Heb. 11:1. "For we walk by faith, not by sight" II Cor. 5:7. The powers that were only want us to see their mirage of a satanic matrix, a fantasy world in contradiction to the Kingdom of God. A marquee at the concert hall has a message that reads: "Remember Christina. Remember Orlando." Which begs the question: remember what? What are they trying to impregnate in our mind. That we should all be waving rainbow flags and riding unicorns at the carnival?

We have a locust problem in America and Europe; swarms of racial aliens devouring our land. Negress Attorney General Loretta Lynch, had the audacity or perhaps New Age imbecility to suggest, in light of the Whorlando false flag operation, that radical Islamic terrorism can only be fought with "love." This is what the dark-skinned imbeciles running our nation represent; she said, "To the LGBT community—we stand with you. The good in this world far outweighs the evil. Our common humanity transcends our differences, and our most effective response to terror is compassion, it's unity and it's love. We're the Department of Justice, and we're here to combat terrorism on our soil with love bombs. Pay attention, America. It works. Terrorists melt. They fall to their knees and weep."

This she-monkey is the top law-enforcement officer of the land. Should we just roll over and play dead as she wishes. Because you are a domestic terrorist if you don't turn in your AR-15 and 9mm pistol when they come knocking on your door. Well, White Christian Americans should just say "NO!" Because those who call good evil and evil good will not and cannot repeal the 2nd Amendment; they don't have the spine. They can never erase Jesus telling His followers to sell their coat and buy a sword (Luke 22:36). The time for turning swords into plowshares is after the great harvest when they shall not learn war anymore (Micah 4:3). But, before that glorious day, Jude (1:3) told his fellow believers, "that you contend [fight] earnestly for the faith which was once for all handed down to the saints." The real saints are not catholic clerics or pop singers, but stout Christian men who will die for their God and race.

Furthermore in Jude, he explains why we bear arms if necessary: "For certain people have crept in unnoticed who long ago were designated for this condemnation, ungodly people, who pervert the grace of our God into promiscuity and deny our only Master and Lord, Jesus the Anointed" (verse 4). Is this not talking about the mongrels and change agents usurping God's Law today with the traditions of man and the 'all you need is gooeey love' crowd? "Now I want to remind you, though you know these things: The Lord first saved a people out of Egypt and later destroyed those who did not believe; and the messengers which kept not their first dominion, forsaking their proper abode, He has kept under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. In like manner, Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities around them, who indulged in sexual immorality and pursued strange flesh, are on display as an example of those who sustain the punishment of eternal fire" Jude 1:5-7. This is indeed talking about the purveyors of fear porn and their altars to Baal, their groves of abomination and ritual murder.

"Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths" Prov. 3:5-6. That's not only good advice, it is a guarantee that we will be on the right course. In a news event like Whorlando, it's easy to jump into one of many conspiracy theories. The enemy is happy to provide as many rabbit trails as there are people that will go down this or that path. But, for the Christian and expressly the Identity Christian, we must navigate through the valley of shadows and death and let holy spirit give us direction.

Ms. Grimmie thought she was a Christian, but had no spiritual integrity. "Do not love the world nor the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him" 1 John 2:15. I've been reading as much as I can on this very high profile case, because it dovetails with the 2016 election. I try to put great care into my titles as you know, and I must give credit where credit is due and how this presentation has evolved. Last week in the Christogenea Forum, William Finck suggested that we should call it the "Whorlando Homocaust" and I thought that was very clever and appropriate. And then as I was researching, another article caught my eye titled 'Orlando Changes Everything.' And thus the birth of my title 'Whorlando Changes Nothing.' I was immediately repulsed by the author, so-called Brother Nathaniel (Kaplan), who is a repulsive jew and clown dressed in an Eastern Orthodox costume. I have had a long standing policy of never quoting jews or niggers, because even if it is in the proximity of being the truth, it always had the leaven of evil and will spoil our course of instruction.

The only time to quote the words of an enemy is to nail the lid on his coffin, not as a means of teaching. Otherwise, their abuse of Scripture is used against us. It is our weapon, not theirs. “For the Word of God is living and effective and sharper than any double-edged sword, penetrating as far as the separation of soul and spirit, joints and marrow. It is able to judge the ideas and thoughts of the heart” Heb. 4:12. As far as the racial alien, the judgments of God are unknown (Ps. 147:20). They cannot rule over us, because they are lawless. If we submit, we lose.

This is God’s Law which we usually only hear at Christmas time from Jer. 10:2, “Learn not the way of the heathen.” Kaplan is not our brother. The nature of the beast is that we have become a consumer nation; we acquire everything the world has to offer. But, we hesitate over the Word of God. But, Prov. 4:7 stipulates that, “with all thy getting get understanding.” The enemy knows that if we don’t get understanding from our own kind, then our people will learn things from non-Israelites and God forbid ... jews. There is nothing that a heathen can teach you that you can’t learn from a White man.

Failure to avoid all appearances of evil (1 Thes. 5:22), like the leaven of the Pharisees, is something that stunts our growing in grace, in developing a racial consciousness, to protect the well-being of His flock. I can’t believe the infatuation of some so-called Christian Identity pastors have with the negro preacher “Pastor” Manning from New York City just because he’s critical of Obama. He conducts interracial marriages and that’s more than just a little leaven. Jeremiah is talking about race, not just Christmas trees. The “heathen” that he speaks of “are vain [worthless] works, wrought in mockery [errors]; in the time of their visitation they shall perish. Such is not the portion of Jacob.” Jer. 10:15 LXX.

It’s not our part to be worthless by repeating the wisdom of lower primates. Jesus told Peter “Feed My sheep.” He didn’t say “Let My sheep feed off the goats.” “For the shepherds have become foolish, and have not sought the Lord; therefore the whole pasture [society] has failed, and the sheep have been scattered. Behold, there comes a sound of a noise, and a great earthquake from the land of the north, to make the cities of Judah a desolation, and a resting-place for ostriches” Jer. 10:21-22 LXX. God has a sense of humour, with the analogy of the proverbial cartoon, burying their heads in the sand.

Most people are oblivious to conspiracies or the occult technology of illusion or, in plain English, being lied to on a monumental scale. But, just like the ancient trees decorated with gold and silver and oh so pretty in the church sanctuary “they are all the work of cunning men” Jer. 10:9. They are not men who are smart, but cunning and predatory. I mean, how many lies does it take to persuade a congregation that emulating a pagan practice will not incur divine wrath? What does it take to get a congregation to learn the ways of the heathen? Well, it starts with decking the halls with boughs of holly and ends with a stranger behind the pulpit preaching Baal.

There most certainly is Baal worship in judeo-churchianity today. The priestcraft willingly regurgitates what is popular with the majority, but an abomination to God. “And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually” Gen. 6:5. If Noah and his immediate family were the only ones who were “perfect in their generations” (verse 8), meaning they were racially pure, then that means everybody else had forsaken their racial purity and mixed their blood with mongrels; or they refused to propagate the race and resorted to homosexuality.

It was enough lies and cunning rationalizations that God brought a great flood upon them and killed them all. It doesn’t make any difference in the debate over the Flood being global or local; the point is that the Adamites got their information from the wrong sources and it was their death sentence; their unbelief of Noah’s warning. Having an undeveloped racial consciousness can be deadly for any White nation, and history proves it. Fast forward to the 20th century and the gargantuan fraud of the Holocaust starting with the premise that jews died, but escalates to how many and how they died.

This has turned into a lucrative industry built on a mountain of lies. Why should the jew stop there with such overwhelming success about an atrocity that never happened the way they present the information, or should we say disinformation. Jewish lies matter when the course of history is a voyage of another Titanic. It was the arrogance of man thinking the works of his flesh were unsinkable. We have the same mentality today with the perpetrators of false flag operations.

William Finck made this interesting comment last week, “Whatever happened at the Pulse nightclub is truly of no concern to us. We have no care for dozens of dead Sodomites, and in fact, we would prefer to see either the end of Sodomy, or the end of all Sodomites, whichever must come first. Neither do we have any care for the Arab that allegedly did the shooting. So for us, there is no Pulse to speak of. But the lack of a pulse in the body of anointed (Christ), that is our concern. While the nation is mourning its Sodomites, it should instead be mourning its children.”

Whatever happens in any of these immoral nightclubs should not reach the ears of our young ones; for the clients of these places of ill repute would like nothing more than free advertising for their degenerate proclivities. Pedophilia is closely linked to this lifestyle and thus the need to recruit, proving its predatory habit. “And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but instead reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret” Eph. 5:11-12. For years I have said that the nation is brain-dead and the church is comatose [not YOUR church, of course, just all the others]. We are on the verge of flat-lining spiritually. There is no pulse in the church. The Pulse in Whorlando is a disgusting illusion.

But that should come as no surprise as Jesus told His disciples that He would be leaving the earth and the days would come when they would be longing for His return. The Disciples eagerly wanted to know “when?” And Jesus told them, as quoted in Matthew 24:37,m “as it was in the days of Noah,” Luke 17:28 also added another clue, “Likewise, just as it was in the days of Lot.” Which we know refers to Sodom and its ultimate doom when it rained fire.

In other words, Jesus is returning to earth when there will be rampant degeneracy and multiculturalism. The flood we’re experiencing today is illegal immigration and ironically it was “Latino Night” at the Pulse where the false flag transpired. Quite frankly, it is nearly impossible today to discern the difference between Latinos and Arabs. That's how far advanced the melting pot has gotten; that everything after its own kind can no longer be identified other than one homogenized hybrid for the Jew World Order.

Why? To control us and play God. Just a sidebar to racial identity; some say there are good Jews and bad Jews, but that is not the implication of the good and evil figs of Judah i.e. the good were racially pure and the evil were mongrel. The problem arises when a racially pure Israelite becomes mongrelized mentally. They're on the boat too, the Titanic, that will not save them from the flood of aliens. The demise of Esau-Edom does not make any provision for good evil Jews, if I may use an oxymoron, because there are none. Likewise, the same can be said for all heathens, whom, as I quoted above from Jude 1:4 are "designated for condemnation."

It was early in the morning when destruction came upon Sodom (Gen. 19:15). What a dreadful surprise it must have been for the safe and secure citizens in their normal daily routines of carnality and worldly consumptions. And like the days of Lot, Jesus is saying in Luke 17:30, "According to these things it shall be, in the day the Son of Man is revealed." By "revealed" we are to understand the Second Coming.

Things will seem normal, but normal to perverts and race-mixers. Jesus didn't say that all things would be in good working order or there wouldn't be any chaos. Wick- edness will be the routine norm, which we're looking squarely at right now. The same sense of false security was enjoyed by the Jews when the Roman armies came in 70 AD, a sense of omnipotence. The Rothschild dynasty and its ancillary aristocracy of the rich exude the same invincible arrogance as their predecessors. But, because Christian Identity identifying the destroyers of the world, their inevitable day of judgment is nearing ... it only gets closer with each passing day. Wherever they are, they will be found and the Law will be executed, not with love bombs, but the fires of prophecy.

Whorlando changes nothing. America is still slated for destruction. Albert Pike's plan for three world wars is still in the works. Gen. Wesley Clark's (a crypto Jew) Freudian Slip that they (the CIA/Mossad) were going to take out seven countries in the Middle East is almost complete, except for Syria and Iran. The Protocols (of the Learned Elders of Zion - #463 @ $5.95) are being fulfilled. Communism is alive and well in the USA; all ten planks of the Communist Manifesto have been legislated into law.

In all of these conspiratorial manifestations, miscegenation and same-sex marriage is part of their agenda. Jewish pundits can pit the Pulse against the pastors of Jesus, but draconian hate crime laws will only make us stronger and more determined. The ADL expressed shock and horror over the attack on queers by an Islamic extremist. This shouldn't be surprising being that the Talmud sanctions sodomy and that Jews bankroll many sodomite events. It has been established that the attacker was himself a sodomite and heathen, which the ADL coddles to the detriment of White nations. The ADL issued a decree to this effect:

"As we mourn the victims and extend our deepest condolences to the families and friends of those lost, we will redouble our resolve to fight against the forces of hatred and extremism that led to this barbaric act of hatred."

I'm issuing this decree to the ADL, we are quadrupling our resolve to "contend for the faith" to fight those who help the ungodly and love them who hate the Lord (II Chron. 19:2). Jews only love themselves as they collectively consider themselves to be the Messiah. For 2000 years the Jew has rejected Jesus the Christ and wallowed in their murder of Him. I am comforted with the Revelation of John in 18:6, [Mystery Babylon]; of which the ADL is a part] even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works; in the cup which she has filled, fill to her double." Babylon is in the throes of falling ... as in the days of Noah.

Speaking of floods. Did you hear about the rains here and there? In West Virginia they said on the news that it was one of those floods you see every 1000 years. So far 23 dead and more expected. CNN interviewed the mayor of one of the cities hardest hit; he was a negro (Deut. 17:15)

White House is preoccupied with setting up an LBG T monument, designating it part of the National Parks System, in honor of the Whorlando false flag.

There is only one ark for this madness and it is Christian Identity. The picture above is another down-pouring of rain, causing floods in key places that may have affected the vote in Britain last week, 23-June, which may have been the outpouring of holy spirit that decided a crucial divorce case of our brethren deciding to leave the European Union, an defending the global economy of usury banksters. The EU has caused all the trouble of mass refugees flooding into Europe, with a spike in rampant crime waves and the erosion of national identities. The British people said enough and have reclaimed their sovereignty. Most people are unaware of the fact that the logo of the EU is a depiction of an unfinished Tower of Babel with the motto:

'Europe: many tongues, one voice.'

This is clearly in contempt for the biblical narrative of ancient times and God's will to scatter the nations when they commit the sin of dwelling with strangers (Ex. 23:33). Notice the inverted stars form an occult pentagram. Thus, the EU is one of the most prominent manifestations of Babylon in the world today and why the British vote was so significant.

Please notice in Gen. 11:8 that God not only disbanded the multiculturalism, but that "they stopped building the city." We pray that God's Covenant People sent a clear message for their contempt of a one world government without Jesus. In fact, the name 'British' means 'covenant man,' being derived from two Hebrew words: brith means covenant and ish means man. Israelites were and still are the Covenant People of God and they are the only race of people to whom pertains the New Covenant (Heb. 8:8).

White people need to ask themselves which nation descended from Abraham, Isaac and Jacob-Israel and according to the Bible were to be called "great"? Let's read from Gen. 12:2, "And I will make thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great." It is self evident from the history of the last 4000 years, from the time of God's promise to Abraham, that there is only one nation that qualifies for this distinction — Great Britain! The jews have threatened Britain with economic turmoil, which only proves the nature of this wicked beast and never had any love for England in the first place. The same can be said for America. We need to remember the Law and the Covenants—not sodomites.

No false flag can fulfil its purpose when there is divine intervention. God interfered in the affairs of man to fulfill His own purpose; His plan for the ages cannot be interfered with by the empires of man. They all come and go and the last one of prophecy, Mystery Babylon, shall be made desolate in one hour "and shall be found no more at all." (Rev. 18:19, 21). Whorlando changes nothing in spite of Nathaniel Kaplan saying it changes everything. You see, change agents, like Kaplan, try to cast a giant shadow larger than life; even if they are 2% of the population and yet 4 times that in Congress. God controls 100%: "The Most High is ruler over the kingdoms of men; and gives it to whomsoever He will and sets up over it the lowliest of men" Daniel 4:17.

Kaplan acknowledges the jewish script of calling good evil and evil good, but says political correctness "wins the day." But the real kicker is his theory that Donald Trump has sided with the queers; and he has, by declaring that Whorlando "Strikes at the soul of who we are as a nation, and is an assault on the ability of people to love who they want and express their identity."

Who we are as a nation is, "as in the days of Noah." Mr. Trump and we have gone into captivity for the very same reason as our ancient ancestors i.e. "They went whoring after other gods" (Judges 2:17). Kaplan gives no mention to false flags and dismisses it as neither a terrorist act nor a hate crime, but rather "gay-motivated." The sophistry of his argument is that false flags don't create the terror of heightened fear and the dialectic of all things gun control! But, his spin is that the terrorism and hate card will be played by the powers that were; his secret cronies. No kidding ... ya think? He mistakenly thinks jews control everything without giving God the slightest honorable mention.

Kaplan changes nothing in the scheme of God's plan for the ages.

And this is the insanity of taking vermin like him seriously, quoting him as if he has a grain of truth; it is all leaven; his parent theology was a murderer and a liar from the beginning of genetic judaism in Babylon. He can never put on a costume and pretend to be the bride at the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. The bride is represented by true Israelites who have overcome the world, who guard the Word of God with their lives. We don't give in to fear ("for fear of the jews") of the world's boogiemens as Kaplan tries to inculcate the old hackneyed mark of the beast, a micro-chip implanted in your head or hand, , connected to the Matrix.

We should be more concerned about our name written in the Book of Life. The more Whorlandos that push the envelope of credibility, the more ludicrous they will appear to those who have eyes to see it's "The Game" vs God.

He tries to inculcate the idea that the jews' media changed the morality of America to accept the notion that men and women of the same sex have the right of marriage, or that men and women can reverse their gender if they so choose. He acts as if it's a done deal, but not even the art of the deal can "put asunder whom God has joined together" (Mt. 19:5-6). "Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator" Romans 1:25. It is the jew who says a false flag changes everything. God is not the author of confusion. Because of your unbelief, you can discount Malachi 3:6 at your own peril; but, it says, "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not destroyed."

Conversely, if we do believe a lie (II Thes. 2:10-11), that the God of Israel is a versatile God who loves everybody, then that will be the beginning of the end for any hope we may have in advancing the Kingdom of Heaven on earth. "My people are destroyed for a lack of knowledge" Hosea 4:6. If we give quarter to human devils, we are most delusional. The happiest place on earth has become a den of vipers; a habitat of serpents devouring 2-year-old toddlers; an occult mecca of ritual sacrifices; a bastion for replenishing a fresh stock of sodomites.

The American family unit has been under attack for decades. The disintegration of our racial posterity is socially engineered to deny the rightful heirs of the promise their inheritance. But, we should not confuse cause and effect. The jew may be the foremost peddler of all that is in the world (1 John 2:16), however, "Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then when lust has conceived, it brings forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, brings forth death" James 1:14-15.

The merchants of death are trying to sell you a theater of blood. But, there is no blood to speak of in the Whorlando Homocaust, where there should be forensic signatures. Train up a child in the way he should go (Prov. 22:6), and when he is old he will not enter a synagogue of satan, a nightclub for LGBT subhuman garbage. "The next day John saw Jesus coming toward him and said, Look, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world!" John

1:29. Only one sacrifice matters to White people, to wit "Clean out the old leaven so that you may be a new lump, just as you are in fact unleavened. For the Anointed our Passover also has been sacrificed" 1 Cor. 5:7. Our race has the eternal problem of Adam falling from grace. Before Jesus, our ancestors sought forgiveness through animal sacrifices. But, that all changed with the cross of Calvary. I haven't delved into the plethora of evidence to prove that the Orlando shooting was a loosely choreographed drama with drama queens and media whores, because there is a greater import that begs your attention and focus. If we understand biblical principles, we cannot be manipulated by unscrupulous deceivers. If we place our values in the Word of God, we will not be persuaded by rabbi trails and post hypnotic suggestions. There cannot be false flags without false shepherds who embrace the rainbow flag of sodomy. How fitting that the rainbow was a sign after the Flood and that Jesus is returning "as in the days of Noah." Identity thieves walk among us and do not comprehend their wicked violations. The rainbow had nothing to do with the cause of destruction. It is tantamount to calling good evil and evil good. "And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not" John 1:5. the discovery and exploration of AUSTRALIA WHO DID DISCOVER AUSTRALIA?: THE PHOENICIANS

Australian Aboriginal myth and legend speaks of a race of 'culture-heroes' that inhabited the land before them in the long-ago Dream-time, and who had passed on much of their culture to the Aborigines. These 'culture-heroes' are variously described as being pale or white-skinned; that they shaped many natural geological features and erected many, often truly monolithic rock formations, and worshipped the Sun, Moon and Stars.

They appear to have given the Aborigines laws and passed on elements of their religion, such as Sun, Earth-Mother and Sky-Father worship, and other aspects of their ceremonial life. They taught the Aboriginal warriors the use of the woomera in spear throwing and the manufacture of the boomerang. These traditions convinced Australian researcher Rex Gilroy, many years ago, that an advanced megalithic monument-building people had inhabited Australia.

"Yet when I published my theory in the press," recalls Gilroy, "I was immediately attacked by establishment archeologists and historians, with the familiar cries of 'impossible' and that I was wasting my time and money, searching for something that was nothing more than an Aboriginal myth. Nevertheless, my theory led me on a search which culminated, one January day in 1965, while exploring dense scrubland overlooking a Blue Mountains valley, in the discovery of an extensive culture centre of crumbling sandstone mounds, altar stones in the forms of serpent and eagle motifs, and other structures." Gilroy believes these and many other artifacts he and others have found over the years are evidence of a lost chapter in Australian history in which Europeans - most likely, Phoenicians - visited and occupied Australia many millennia ago.

The Phoenicians occupied the coastal regions of Palestine during the time of the Egyptian pharaohs, and were the greatest maritime navigators of their time. Remembered as the sea kings of ancient times, they were so powerful they were able to conquer Egypt, and are known to have established colonies in many regions that would remain unvisited by seafarers again until centuries later when the countries of Western Europe began their colonisation of the continents of Africa, the Americas and Asia. The sea king trading era began with the Minos Kings out of Crete and Libya approximately 2000BC, ending at Carthage around 400 BC. Nothing further in international sea trade after the collapse of maritime history became evident until the 14th Century AD.

Some historians claim these ancient seafarers beat Columbus to the New World by a good 3,000 years. Others, like Australian amateur archeologist Rex Gilroy and Val Osborn, believe that Phoenicians visited the shores of Australia and established mining colonies and trading centres, the remains of which exist on the coast near the Queensland sugar town of Sarina. Osborn claims the Australian government has known about this for over 50 years but has kept the discoveries quiet for fear of upsetting Aboriginal sentiments. He states that the site contains a cemetery, a temple, the remains of port walls and stone sculptures - several of which, he says, have already ended up in private collections.

Numerous reports of artifacts, inscriptions and ruins of harbours and settlements from other localities around Australia have been privately documented and reported but the official stance has always been to reject the claims outright until more tangible evidence is forthcoming.

Osborn first began examining the site at Sarina in 1990. After much research, he has concluded it may well be a typical Phoenician colonial settlement dating from around 1000 BC. Similar sites to what Osborn believes he has found exist around the North African Coasts with Carthage, an old capital, and Tyre and Sidon, as Mediterranean capitals of the era 1500 BC.

A typical Phoenician colony was located on an isthmus, with freshwater springs, twin harbours built of stone set in furnace slag cement, houses of mud brick, with adjacent fields for crops of millet and barley. The religious edifices were unique with Bel and Tanit shrines as God and Goddess, with a tophet cemetery and also small shrines of sawn granite with a crude idol. The sea people were essentially traders in exotic wares and exported and imported also supplying navigators with a monopoly on maps, charts and navigation.

Ezekiel 27 and First Kings 10 in the Old Testament provide descriptions of the lifestyle, culture and cargoes with three year voyages, utilising fleets of Ivory from Africa, peacocks from India, marmasets from the Amazon, etc. A mural depicting Queens Hatshepsut cargoes exists in the giant El Amama Temple on the Nile from the same era. Australia was called Ophir or Big Java or the Aurea Chersensis in old maps and was well documented. Black opal claimed by some to be from Lightning Ridge have been found in Nile jewelry and Ophir gold highly valued in ancient times. What their finders have described as Egyptian, Hebrew, Phoenician and Ogham scripts are documented from sites all over Australia along with what the researchers believe to be the remains of constructions, harbours and roads.

Osborn believes the Freshwater Point complex near Sarina to be uniquely Phoenician, along with other adjacent sites on the Queensland coast. A website (www.awarenessquest.com/osborn.htm) detailing the site describes it thus: "The two artificial harbours meticulously engineered are quite large and represent the labour of many over centuries. The East Harbour is keyed into a reef constructed of placed andesite boulders set in slag furnace cement with a back fill road of mined ore stone. The North Harbour jetty is of collapsed pylons of similar boulders set in gold slag cement, the pylons at intervals presumably once having a timber top. A quarried stone chip road meets this in a triangle fashion. Adjacent to this ruined jetty is slag heaps from furnaces of gold, mercury and copper ore. Furnaces were small, of dolomite bricks of half cubit sized, reinforced. Evidence of refining exists on the Sarina Inlet area with a sluice race and an artificial reservoir of water lined with clay, some two acres overall. A similar reservoir is found on the east. A harbour complex along with a sluice and tilled fields adjacent. As the culture was always of mud brick housing only retaining walls of stone are to be found to date.

"The sea has eroded beaches and foreshores up to 80 meters in places and many parts of the site are now below the tide line, proving great antiquity. The minerals mined were gold, copper and mercury with dolomite mined for the furnace bricks. Intrusive hydro-thermal dykes, sills and stress veins occur from intrusive granite reefs - especially under water at high tide. Mining was carried out by heating the rock then quenching with water to crack the ore body, levering the ore out and then crushing and refining into ingots. Over one million tonnes of ore has been removed and processed with placer deposits carefully cleaned out. Beach boulders along with furnace slag were used to construct both jetties.

Three roads exist for loading of cargo, constructed of quarried ore body stone fill. The main ore bodies run NE from the headland and the miners hacked deep into the headland to the bottom of the "dip." The hydro-thermal bodies still are extremely rich. A further bonanza for a colony could have been the wealth of cowries in the area, known as "money cowries," worth their weight in gold in antiquity. As well, Murex shells indigenous to Phoenicia and the Sarina area exist in abundance. From these shells, the famed Tyrean purple dyer was extracted. Evidence exists of ore from off-shore islands also being processed here. In Sarina Inlet a tophet cemetery along with the usual Bel temple exists with a boat yard and stone slip. Artifacts in cast iron have come to light here on the surface."

The proponents of the Phoenician colony theory claim that the Sarina complex is one of many hydro-thermal, highly mineralized sites on the central Queensland coast. They state that the mining techniques were limited and are strikingly similar to other antique mines such as at the Zimbabwe Plateau complex.

The website continues: "This area covers some 3 kilometers of coastline including the North Harbour refining complex. Here we have a shipyard with boat-slip, revetments, walls and gigantic stone fish traps - the latter now buried in situation from coastal development. The cemetery site is adjacent and typical of Phoenician colonisation. The Phoenicians cremated their dead, interred the bones in amphora. The boatslip shows indications of windlasses and a filled loading platform exists among mangroves. All sites are heavily overgrown.

"The main village is presently not located. The entire area, representing a giant isthmus and rich farmed soils, indicate fields and gardens. Further sites nearby are being investigated. Rich soils indicating part ploughing and agriculture are found near the north reservoir and the east reservoir. These currently bog four wheel drive vehicles. A stone wall runs from the existing road terminus around to the reservoir, a sluicing site. The sluicing site exhibits collapsed stone walls running around to the mine site near the north point. Limestone pier footings are found along with a rock wall that retains the silted reservoir.

To the west of this wall, now below high tide mark, the smelting area exists with discarded ore pieces and slag heaps. The smelting area and slag heaps are presently one metre below high water mark, the erosion having eaten away the inlet beach adjacent - proof of great antiquity. The jetty pylons have disintegrated out of the slag cement over centuries, yet run in a straight line some 600 metres in collapsed footings, through a stone cutting. Initially a quartz reef - gold bearing - has been removed and stone cut out adjacent to a quarried stone chip filled road at the apex of a triangle.

Slag heaps now collapsed, are of mercury, copper and gold origins, greatly eroded. The harbour is of clean sand with a meticulously cleansed bottom adjacent to the ancient jetty."

The website claims loose rock walls exist all over the complex with present regrowth as revetments and retainers and the two giant reservoirs originally lined with red clay from the southwest of Armstrong Beach Creek. "The sluices run across the neck of both reservoirs and are hand constructed. Some stones on the jetties amount to two tonnes in weight and only can have been placed by block and tackle. It is impossible that such stones be lodged in such sites by nature. Evidence of other construction for unknown reasons is found in three circular depressions at the rear of the east jetty wall and at the boat slips back in Sarina Inlet. These may have been designed for derricks.

"The extent of labour required to construct the walls at the north harbour alone has been estimated by a marine engineer at approximately 1000 men working for one year. However, the richness of the ore bodies and gold placer deposits would have justified this outlay of labour. Subsequent removal of rocks up to a mere 50kg by aborigines to build the fish traps has confused visuals somewhat, as well as scattering by cyclones resulting in slumping of many ancient walls."

The website claims the existence of evidence related to the extraction of quartz and calcite ores rich in gold, copper, along with meta cinnabar (mercury) exists in the Sarina area. "Huge veins have been mined from low tide reefs extending back under the headlands. The main deposits existed on the northeast reefs below high water mark available at low tides. At the headland, the miners burrowed under the cliff faces, like rabbits, as far as feasible, for their fire and water techniques. The discard quarried stone was utilized to create roads and fill. Obviously carts and draft animals were used, even as Java buffalo were imported in the 1900s in early Queensland history, as draft animals. These reefs have been professionally hand-mined, walls and jetties carefully engineered. The stone crushed and refined on the north harbour suite in typical Phoenician historical fashion blast furnaces constructed of refractory dolomite-slag brick were fed by wind funneling oxygen from erected sails."

Mercury veins and several gold veins are known to exist under the present headland but researchers claim much of the mining activity they believe they have uncovered was done below high tide. A dolomite vein has been mined at the east of the promontory and recently in the 1920s, a tentative mine for the extraction of gold and copper was worked on the south of the promontory. A rich epidote deposit is said to exist on the south-east point. These mining operations are said to match those on the Percy Islands and other coastal islands and mainland reefs.

"A road of quarried chips exists to the south of Freshwater Point accessing a gold vein in gossan limestone," claims the website. "Microscopic analysis of the slag cements show varying batches of dolomite, gold dust, copper dust and mercury oxides mixed with furnace slag finely ground. This practice of concreting ceased around 200 BC with the introduction of Pozzoland and Portland cements. The absence of shell grits, muds of natural composition preclude any possibility of natural phenomena. Also, both jetties carefully engineered of tumbled granite boulders set in slag cement are in straight lines. Any inference of 'natural phenomena' is therefore contradictory to known geological intrusions. Also, portions of ore bodies from offshore islands found near the smelting site prove mining operations were broad-spectrum.

The website further claims evidence of quarried calcite ore bearing gold, copper or mercury along with quartzite were extracted from the metamorphic zone. "It was then mortared by hand to a crushed dust, put through sluices to extract the fines, then packed into small brick kilns constructed of numbered reinforced bricks of refractory dolomite and slag in the usual small refinery manner. Dolomite was mined from the east reefs and ingots of metal were cast as wedges or "ox hides" were then packed in straw as ballast in Phoenician vessels according to tradition. Reject quarried ore was used to surface roads and landing areas as evidenced. Slag cement from the blast furnaces on the beach was recycled in Jetty construction. In the east jetty, huge andesite boulders taken from adjacent beaches were set in slag cement presumably in wooden forms. In the north jetty complex, piers were constructed at intervals in the same manner. The Phoenicians were renowned for this type of unique slag cement construction.

"A few old footings have been found of limestone concrete using shell grits. The andesite boulders used do not absorb water and are renowned for marine concrete application, unable to swell and crack the cement as the tendency is with other rock. These stones came from varying beach sites especially the north beach where they are conspicuously absent from the grading of this pebble beach, it is expected that other refining sites will turn up adjacent to other harbour walls such as at Avoid Island. Hydro-thermal zones always provide huge riches at the surface, where the veins dip beneath headlands, it was impossible for the ancient miners to go further, requiring explosives. Brown millet has been found to the north relative to Mediterranean millet.

“The Phoenician cargo platforms are built the same way as they were at Carthage and Tyre. Beach boulders, preferably granite rounded by wave action, were set in forms and slag cement poured in. Timber was then set on top. The complex jetties at Sarina, one facing north, the other due east, were so engineered. The east jetty has stones taken from adjacent beaches as does the north jetty. The difference is that in the former, stones are set in a reef of rock and back-filled to a level top with quarried stone. A larger number of yellow dolomite fragments are present as fill, mined from the forepart of the sedimentary reef and from the south point of the isthmus. It is impossible for such tumbled beach stones to migrate naturally from the beaches and to set themselves in a straight line 600 metres long in a cement that analyses microscopically as slag cement.

“The east jetty construction was of pylons of such concrete, at intervals, now collapsed and eroded down to the base of the cement. The centre pylons have vanished from a line of some 800 metres of pylons set in a previously excavated ore reef. A rock cutting runs some 20 metres at the north end to allow for the jetty extension. Some stones weigh over one and a half tonnes. It is possible for delta stones similar to this to deposit themselves in mud at river mouths but these originate in adjacent beaches and are set in varying batches of slag cement, matching pieces of slag cement nearby, showing traces of gold, copper and mercury under analysis. Also, it is obvious that the stones were fitted in places. Both jetties submerge some 1 metre at high tide at present. An eroded curved runway exists at the base of the north jetty for cart loading. A metal detector search proved futile as the entire complex is highly mineralized. The fill used on these jetties for ramps and roads is of quarried stone from the mines and readily matched.”

Osborn and others who support the belief in the existence of Phoenician colonies in Australia claim that the evidence at Sarina points to the harbours in the region having been utilized at least in the last millennium, yet prior to James Cook’s arrival in 1770. However, Australian history of the last 200 years shows no record whatsoever of such activity and local shipping records and news going back to Mackay’s founding shows no indication of the use of this area as a harbour. Coastal packet steamers were ignorant of its existence.

There is a possibility that the site was visited in recent times by Europeans but no occupation indicating such recent colonisation exists prior to Cook. Examination of records from the last 400 years of maritime history show no record of this site, neither was it visited by coastal steamers or fishermen in the early coastal settlements of the last century. It remained unknown and until recently was inaccessible from the mainland as an island and as isthmus. The description Freshwater Point is recent history.

The present bitumen road access was constructed in the 1980s and Admiralty maps show the site as an island. Present mangrove and salt pan growth plus cane farm silt appear to have literally filled the neck into an isthmus, as well as filling Sarina Inlet with huge amounts of farm and clearing silts; the inlet is now inaccessible to shipping at low tides. The neck of the isthmus exhibits several fresh-water springs as well as adjacent to both reservoirs. These bubble up from cracked andesite intrusions. The southeast high knoll has been systematically cleared of vegetation. Small walls of typical tumbled granite boulders (up to 1 tonne), set in cement occur in odd places around Llewellyn Bay. They do not relate to recent fish traps.

The website states that a cast iron tool found below low water mark along with a large rudder pirate - now in the possession of the Central Queensland University - is identical to the depiction of such boat building tools chiseled in stone on a Nile facade at an ancient Egyptian shipyard, alongside adzes, saws, chisels etc.

The website also claims that sawn granite pieces were found on the east harbour wall. “Handsaw marks identical to ancient Egyptian handsaw marks in granite indicate these pieces may have been part of a Phoenician aedicule (a small shrine dedicated to Tanit). Granite pieces here show bollard marks from thimbles used in mooring vessels. Two pieces were found on east harbour wall surface. Aboriginal fish traps at minimum 150 years old exist all over sheltered water sites where local aborigines have recycled ancient stone walls. However, the huge areas of stone traps in Sarina Inlet now buried under silt would have sufficed in one day’s catch approximately 500 persons. They are much older relative to marine encrustations. It is presumed from the enormous labour intensive constructions that approximately 500 to 1000 persons were present at any one time in these mining operations. The entire complex has suffered repeated cyclone activity and a great deal of erosion - proof of great antiquity.”

The annals of ancient history associate the names of Queen Hatshepsut of Egypt and Ethiopia, King Solomon of Israel and Hiram, the Phoenician of Tyre with three year voyages to Ophir in the era of 1000 BC. In 90AD, Ophir was said to be owned by India. Many supporters of the theory of Phoenician colonies in Australia wonder whether the Sarina Inlet site might in fact have been Ophir.

They believe that the limited excavations carried out thus far, along with the existing artifacts they claim have been collected from the surface of the Sarina Inlet site and other sites recently discovered, point to an as-yet undocumented culture of sea trading by ancient Phoenicians. They predict that major excavation of the site - which authorities have shown an unwillingness to support or participate in - would prove once and for all their theory is correct, and if it is, the history of the settlement of Australia would have to be re-written. However, they currently express grave concern that such an outcome might be possible, citing considerable vandalism of the site taking place because it has not been granted heritage protection until such time as its importance as a historical site can be determined.

Proof of settlements and developments would change the Palaentological view of aboriginal origins if evidence arises here of galley slaves utilized for colonisation, for example. It is therefore expected that academic controversy will occur in any future investigation.

ABORIGINAL IMPACT

Aboriginal activity in later times around the Sarina peninsula is well documented and includes reference to aborigines demolishing walls to create fish traps etc, which Osborn believes raises the controversial question as to whether Australian aborigines are remnants of colonies brought from Africa and India by ancient sea king expeditions.

Ethnic groups of Central coastal region have been identified by some Anthropologists through custom and physical attributes as originating from the upper Indus (Dravidian) and African Congo (Negrito). These include what have been referred to as Australian Pygmies (www.sydneylines.com/Pygmies Extinction.htm). As these gene pools are diverse, controversy exists relative to migration and the accepted theory of a Borneo land bridge around 12,000 to 45,000 years ago. Today such theories are generally rejected. The Sarina Phoenician settlement website states: "Pygmy Negritos became extinct around 1000 AD yet they were well documented by pioneers. The local Dravidian tribes have also become extinct. Both cultures were at war with each other at the time of European settlement. The evidence presumes that the Dravidian peoples were indigenous to this area, the Negritos to the north. Large corroborees were held at Sarina as late as 1860."

The impact of aboriginal culture is self evident at the site and adjacent sites of aboriginal camps, one of which was situated on Armstrong Beach, the other at the southwest point of Petersen's Rocks where a shack was built in the early 1900s by a local. Tumbled granite rocks were recycled from adjacent walls and beach deposits to create fish traps, quite evident at half tides. However, as a fish trap to feed a tribe of 100 persons rarely exceeds the size of a normal house block, the gigantic traps in the west portion of Sarina Inlet, the largest known in Australian history (up to 10 acres) are designed to feed a much larger community.

Researchers who have examined the Sarina site claim the giant traps in the north west are today buried in silt and only emerge after cyclonic floods. These adjoin the complex of walls, shipyard and slip-way. They claim the slip-way has a standard 15 degree slope, is heavily eroded and is backed by circular indentations indicating derricks or windlasses. The similar depressions in the front harbour wall may have been recycled as fish traps by aborigines. Circular traps are unknown elsewhere.

The website claims the difference in stone construction between the aborigines and Europeans is self evident. "The aboriginal saw no need to place one flat surface against another and had no knowledge of mortars. Latter day aboriginal occupation so evident would have removed any metals left over by the earlier culture. On the southeast point of the isthmus, standard size fish traps still exist along with an ancient dolomite and mercury mine to the west some 300 metres. The site of the 1920s gold and copper mine, a very small three-man enterprise, is identified by a silted hole and some three tonnes of quarried copper tailings. Aboriginal artifacts are fairly plentiful, scattered about the camp.

ABOUT THE PHOENICIANS

The name derives from the purple dye of the murex shell used to create a "papal" purple. Originally, sea traders from the Red Sea, they moved capitals to Tyre, Byblos and Sidon on the Canaan coast and are referred to in history as Canaanites in Arkadian scripts of 1500 BC on an Egyptian Stele at Memphis. The early mynos kings of Crete and Lydia are also closely identified. Cargo vessels were built of Lebanon Cedar and Aleppo pine and Bashan oak. Large double ended craft with square sails and up to 200 galley slaves at the oars. The Phoenicians monopolized the sea trade and were master mariners and navigators. Cargo voyages took three years and one such fleet sailed to Ophir with Israelite overseers and Phoenician navigators as described in the Old Testament, seeking pure white timber for Solomon's Jerusalem Temple.

SHIPS AND COLONIES

The colonies of Hanno the Phoenician are recorded on a stele at Carthage, a latter day outpost. Hanno was banished with his relatives for failing to win a war. His emigration consisted of 60 vessels and 30,000 settlers, some 500 per vessel. In 425 BC, he took his settlers to the west coast of Africa to found new city states. Pharaoh Necho hired the Phoenicians to circumnavigate Africa and Darius the Mede is known to have hired their ships and mercenaries. Trade and import/export maritime activities were the monopoly of Phoenicians, especially in metals and game. The Hanno expedition gives a glimpse of the fading Phoenician Empire in its last stages.

Sadly, Phoenician history is sparse and maritime trade collapsed with the loss of library maps and navigators. The trade did not revive until the 14th century AD. The Libyan colonies are said to bear startling similarities to the Sarina site, however, archeologists find typical Phoenician colonies distinct from any other.

WERE THERE REALLY DINOSAURS ON NOAH'S ARK?

Ark Encounter, a $100 million Noah's Ark attraction opened recently (July 2016) in Williamstown, Kentucky. Ken Ham, of Answers in Genesis, the ministry that built the ark, hopes it will draw millions of visitors, and convince them regarding his young-earth interpretation of the Genesis creation account. Inside the ark are museum-style displays depicting Noah's family, and cages containing animal replicas. The animal cages, consistent with Ken Ham's young-earth position, contain dinosaurs!

Those who teach that Noah was contemporary with dinosaurs assume that Adam was the first human, that the universe therefore is only five to six days older than the date of Adam's creation (about 6000 years ago). While this was believed by medieval theologians, and who translated this belief into still used English versions of the Bible, it is not required by the Hebrew text.

The Bible opens, stating, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." From this, it is reasonable to assume that "in the beginning" God created time, space,

ISRAEL'S CALENDAR AND THE TRUE SABBATH

by Curtis Clair Ewing

some 50 years ago Rev. S.W. Gamble, a Methodist minister, published a book dealing with Sunday as the Sabbath as found in our Bible.

The book had several reprints. Now Rev. Ewing has kindly permitted me to see a large number of additions which years of study on his part has enable him to add to Gamble's work (Gordon Pickett - an astronomer and mathematician, who for 40 years has made chronology and calendars his major study) matter, and energy—out of nothing. Then, during age-long periods, and using processes of His own design. He created the heaven and the earth. When first created, “the earth was without form, and void” (Genesis 1:2). Over billions of years, and again using processes of His own design, God caused a portion of the earth’s land to rise above its water. It was probably during this time that other processes were used to make our planet habitable for life. But the earth was yet “without form,” so its single land mass was divided, i.e. formed into continents. This seems to be verified by the process geologists call continental shift. For obvious reasons medieval theologians did not factor in later discoveries when translating from Hebrew. This should be considered when interpreting the Genesis creation account.

The science of molecular biology has revealed that cells, the building blocks of living things, are extremely complex. Smaller than 1/100th the size of the head of a pin, a cell contains trillions of atoms, millions of intricately arranged working parts, and has an information storage system containing megabytes of data. The previously-thought “simple cell” is biochemically sophisticated and is capable of creating all the chemistry and components of life. Many scientists who understand the cell, reject the nothing-created-everything theory of origins held by the secular establishment. Told, however, that the Genesis creation account supports a young earth only, many of these scientists have been reluctant to identify the intelligence behind the cell in a Genesis context. Instead, they call it Intelligent Design. A good introduction to this subject is the recent publication, Undeniable: How Biology Confirms Our Intuition That Life is Designed, by molecular-biologist Douglas Axe. Available on amazon.com, the book is getting five-star reviews by the author’s fellow scientists. Longer, article-length reviews can be read at discovery.org, Website of the Center for Science and Culture.

Secular scientists (those given all the publicity) would have us assume that nothing created everything, and that there is no intelligence, or designer behind anything. While they are probably correct in that the aforementioned, time, space, matter, and energy were once concentrated, and exploded in “the big bang,” this does not disprove the existence of a designer-creator. All it proves is that billions of years ago, God used such a method. Supporting this is a law of physics known as cause and effect. It tells us that that which exploded and formed the universe could not have originated without a cause. Because it could not, the only logical explanation for the origin of these essentials, is that they were created—out of nothing by a self-existing intelligent being, one without beginning, and without end. These are the attributes of Yahweh, the God of the Bible.

Ancient cuneiform letters, on clay tablets, was one of the first non-pictograph methods of writing. The Ebla tablets, uncovered in a 1970s dig at the long gone city of Ebla in present-day northern Syria were written in this style. Archeologists believe the building which housed them burned when the city was destroyed by a grandson of Sargon the great in 2250 BC. Of special interest to Christians are references in these tablets to the ancient cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, Ashdod and Sidon. Also named are the five cities in Genesis 14:2, the false god Baal and other biblical subjects.

The deciphering of ancient cuneiform writings has led to other discoveries. One of these suggests that the first chapters in the book of Genesis were written in it before Hebrew. This explains their extreme brevity and peculiar composition. When the cuneiform style of writing is factored into the creation story, it tells us that what occurred during those six, twenty-four hour days 6000 years ago, was not the actual creating of the universe. Rather, it is describing six morning-to-evening sessions, during which Adam was told regarding what was created in the ages before him. Supporting this is that the earth’s light sources, the sun, moon, and stars, are not mentioned until the fourth day. This tells us that day-four was not the date of their creation. If so, there could not have been cycles of day and night, of light and darkness in the three days prior. The secular world has a field day with this issue, one widely used in its attempt to discredit the Bible and its creation account.

Thus the sun was created long before its function was explained to Adam as per Genesis 1:14-19, on day-four, 6000 years ago. Earth also, was in existence before that time. Logic and reason tell us that God, after creating the earth, made it habitable. Then, based on His own designs, and using processes known only to Him, God began creating life. This resulted in creatures such as dinosaurs, a species extinct millions of years before quadrupeds were explained on day-six. The sudden appearance of the life forms found in the fossil record sheds much doubt on evolution, a theory unable to explain which came first, the chicken, or the egg. That the chicken came first, with the ability to lay an egg fits the creation model of origins. As for exactly how the various egg-laying species were created, and how long the process took, would be speculation only. All we know for sure, is that it had to involve the intelligent design of a supernatural being.

Exodus 20:10 (“for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth”) is much quoted by young-earth creationists. But “made,” in this text, is from the Hebrew word asah, which is much broader in meaning than bara, the word translated in Genesis 1:1, Asah is translated “showed” in Genesis 24:14 (“thou hast showed”). This means that in six days the Lord—showed (asah), or demonstrated heaven and earth. Thus did God not actually create in those six days. He showed, or explained what was created long before. Yes, God “rested on the seventh day” (Genesis 2:2), but this was not because He needed rest, for Yahweh is spirit, and does not get tired. It was Adam who needed rest, who needed God to cease after those six morning and evening sessions 6000 years ago. “Rested” (Strong’s #7673) is the same Hebrew word translated “cease” elsewhere in Genesis.

Young-earth creationists would have us believe that Noah was contemporary with 90-foot long dinosaurs, and that “Behemoth” (Job 40:15) and “Leviathan” (Job 41:1) are proof. But context, and Strong’s Concordance both tell us that Behemoth (#930) was the hippopotamus or “Nile horse,” and Leviathan (#3882) the Nile river crocodile, and/or a large sea creature. Neither do marine fossils on mountain tops, prove that Noah’s flood (about 3145 BC) covered those mountains. The fossils originated on an ocean floor, before the mountains were formed. (Many mountain ranges were formed by under-water upheavals in the earth’s crust). And yes, Genesis 7:19-20 does say “the mountains” were covered “under the whole heaven.” But har, from which “mountains” is translated, can also mean “hills,” and “under the whole heaven,” as used in Deuteronomy 2:25, shows that this phrase is not limited to a 360 degree, planet-wide application. Also a stumbling block is the Hebrew word, erets. Not understanding the impossibility of a universal flood, medieval theologians translated it as “earth.” But erets can also be translated as land, so all the flood account is saying is that the water covered the highest hills in the land, from horizon to horizon.

Also not holding water (no pun intended) is that humans as diverse as African pygmies and Arctic Eskimos, not only originated from Noah’s family, but within generations of the thought-to-be universal flood. A genetic impossibility, this implies, not only evolution, but a type so rapid, that no evolutionist would make such a claim. A regional flood does not require this. It also agrees with history, that which tells us that other races were on other continents immediately before, and immediately after the flood. They were not affected by it.

Adam was not the first human. When Cain for example, was about to be driven from his homeland, he worried that—“everyone that findeth me shall slay me” (Genesis 4:14). Cain feared hostility that would be triggered by his entering the domain of a different, and already existing people. The terms “whosoever, him,” and “any,” in this next verse support this. Once in the land of his exile “Cain knew his wife; and she conceived” (4:17). Where Cain found this wife, is answered by the preceding references to pre-Adamic humans. This is not contradicted by Genesis 3:20 (“Eve ... was the mother of all living”). “Living,” in this context, would be similar in meaning to that in Psalm 69:28 (“the book of the living”); it does not therefore, identify all humans.

The bottom line is, that an incorrect interpretation of the Genesis creation, and flood accounts is leaving the Bible open to ridicule. The secular establishment is using this as ammunition to discredit the rest of the Book.*

HOW CHRISTIANS HELP AMERICA

Enslave People, Families & Churches by pastor Robert McCurry

When God ordained and defined the realms of self government, family government, church government and civil government, He wasn’t playing around. He was serious.

Lovingly serious, as always. God created and has sufficiently revealed the roles, responsibilities and limitations of each of these spheres of governmental influence so that we might know how things work in His creation and thereby find our way to true peace, prosperity, liberty, and happiness in that very same creation. But we have different ideas.

Here in America—and in Christianity—we think we have “a better way;” a way that inherently enables and encourages the State to expand over and above all other realms of government “out of necessity” (though certainly not any biblically defined, and redefining each of these “competing” governmental realms on its own terms and for its own benefit. This is why we have things like public schools.

These schools - or, better put, Temples of Statism (www.firebreathingchristian.com/archives/12318) [This is the satanic philosophy of the pursuit of knowledge that is at the heart of State-run children’s education. Contrary to the consistent contentions of its practitioners and defenders, State-run schools are anything but non-religious in nature. They are completely religious in nature. They are quintessentially and comprehensively religious. There’s not one fraction of one part of one subject that they touch on and define in a non-religious manner. Their approach to the pursuit of knowledge - to the pursuit of life - is the philosophical soul and worldview foundation of the anti-Christ spirit behind all anti-Christ religions, including the religion of Statism] - are the primary reason why each successive generation of “Christians” is more Socialist, more Statist, and more anti-Christ than the last. The decline of our culture really is no mystery at all. We’ve embraced an approach to the pursuit of knowledge lifted directly from the serpent’s tongue in Genesis 3 and are simply reaping the entirely predictable “benefits.”

So why do most professing Christians send their little ones off to these Temples of Statism for mind-sculpting in a flagrantly anti-Christian State-run system of “education”?

‘Cause its American, that’s why.

It has an American flag out front.

Our moms and dads and grandmothers and granddads and pastors all went to those very same schools, don’tcha know. That’s why.

We do it because that’s just what we’ve always done.

It’s what we’ve been programmed to do for generations now. We don’t know and can’t seriously imagine anything else. We’ve gone so far out to sea that we can’t even see the shore anymore, and we’ve been out here for so long that not only do we not even remember what something called “the shore” looks like, we question whether such a thing even exists. That’s how far gone we are.

Could there actually be such a land where people are free, liberty is true, civilization is advanced, and ... the State has no role whatsoever in children’s education? This concept is pure heresy to The System in which we live.

And it’s definitely not something being addressed biblically by the vast majority of “Christian leaders” guiding even the most supposedly “conservative, Bible preaching” churches in the land. More often than not, those folks vigorously support State-managed Genesis 3 style children’s education. They support and defend the golden calf being most effectively used to enslave the culture, including their own church members.

So yeah, it’s pretty bad and has been heading this way for a while now. Our flight from a biblical approach to children’s education, self government, family government, church government and anything else that would dare threaten the power of the almighty State has been multigenerational in duration, meaning that, after generations of State-programmed Christian moms, dads, pastors and preachers, we’ve been thoroughly conformed to the anti-Christ religion of Statism.

In spite of the lovingly provided specificity of Scripture as to which governmental realm has primary authority over the area of children’s education (the family), and which governmental realm has none (the State), “We the People” have been conditioned to believe that the education of children is, at the end of the day, the responsibility of the State.

In this, Christians have become valuable tools of the State, helping it to mortally wound and subjugate its three primary institutional competitors to power, namely: self-government, family government and church government.

Now most churches aren't really churches, at least not as Scripture defines the body of Anointed in its localized forms. Churches don't discipline, don't correct, don't teach sound doctrine, and don't expose darkness or tear down enemy strongholds in accordance with the Gospel-fueled Great Commission. These days, churches just let the State do anything the State wants to do with little, if any, push-back, so long as their precious little 501(C)3 business models are allowed to produce adequate material wealth.

Churches have abdicated their responsibility to the State, and the State has been all too happy to take the power it's been wrongly given.

In this, churches have contributed most significantly to the State-promoted destruction of the other two God-ordained governmental realms: The individual and the family. With churches no longer operating biblically, the State has been left (and often is even encouraged) by the church to "help" individuals and families in ways that—you guessed it—are clearly unbiblical, and therefore ultimately produce rank immaturity and perpetually increasing dependence of individuals and families upon the almighty State.

So here we are, getting exactly what we deserve and should certainly expect if we'd just read and believe Scripture, and we dare to wonder why our culture is now dominated and defined by infantile, dependent individuals: broken, dependent families; and laughably impotent (though materially prosperous) churches all operating under total domination by the State. After generous State-sponsored mind- and worldview-sculpting, Christians find themselves living in a culture in which self-government, family government and church government have become farcical, tragic jokes, while State governmental power has become all that there really is when push comes to shove and where the rubber meets the road.

State-managed children's "education" is now assumed to be an essential core component of life. Which means State-defined law is a given. Which gives us "legal" child sacrifice, "legal" porn, "legal" 'gay marriage,' "legal" divorce on demand, "legal" kidnap of children by the State, and the "right" to openly construct pagan altars and worship false gods, including Allah and the devil himself.

All of this—every bit of the cultural implosion and civilizational nightmare unfolding before our eyes—is purposeful. God is telling us something. He is reminding us that His Word is binding, whether we like it or not, whether we believe it or not, and whether we choose to repent and conform to it or not. He is showing us that there's no reliable substitute for a clear stand upon His Word.

Vague appeals to "God" or "Christian values" won't do it. General claims of "being a Christian" or "loving Jesus" won't do it. True faith-fueled obedience, granted only by God's grace, is our only hope for salvation—be it political, legal, economic, educational salvation, or any other kind.

With regard to what we Americans like to refer to as "The Great American Experiment," the answer to one question will determine whether that experiment ends in failure and death or success and life. That question is: By what standard?

By what standard will "We the People" define reality, liberty, law, justice, and freedom?

By what standard will we educate our children and shape our culture?

By what standard will we pursue life in every realm of life in God's creation?

Public schools will never acknowledge, much less provide, the one and only correct answer to that all important life-, culture-, and civilization-defining question. Public schools will always—by their very nature—do everything within their power to steer every mind under their charge in any direction BUT toward that one essential, life-restoring answer. Why is this so?

Because public schools are consecrated to pursuing a Genesis 3 satanic model to the pursuit of knowledge. This is the very foundation of State-managed children's "education."

It is through Christian support of these Temples of Statism that our culture has been brought to the brink of death, and it is only through Christian repentance and rejection of this satanic system of children's "education" that the culture has any hope of finding true life, liberty, peace, and freedom.

God has spoken clearly. He's also given us yet another undeserved day to turn from our rebellion and submit to Him,

The time is fast approaching when there will be no more undeserved days and opportunities for repentance and restoration. The time is fast approaching when He will allow us to experience the full weight of our pride and rebellion.

But in the moment before us now, we do have the matchlessly beautiful opportunity to repent, believe, and find Light in this present darkness, all by God's grace, all for His glory, and all to our eternal benefit.

May He grant us the grace to do so!

CASE LAW

Case Law is a form of jurisprudence that is not taken from the original Common Law basis on which the original Constitution and Declaration of Independence were established.

Case Law is an ancient Jewish system under which most courts, and particularly Federal Courts operate.

Case Law, however, forms the basis for the Babylonian Talmud of Judaism, as historic rabbinical decisions are retained to be used again and again, as if each historic event and decision were applicable in all subsequent cases. This view is an obvious circumvention by judge and courts to avoid responsibility by adopting earlier court rulings, if they are close to the current case.
