"Blessed be the LORD God of Israel; For He hath visited and redeemed His people, And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; That we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which he sware to our father Abraham, That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our lives." ### IT'S GOING TO GET BETTER by late Pastor Mark Downey

Scripture Reading: II Cor. 4:1-6 "Therefore seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not; but we have renounced the things hidden because of shame, not walking in craftiness or adulterating the word of God, but by the manifestation of truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God. But if our gospel is covered up, it is covered up to those who are perishing. The god of this age has blinded the minds of unbelievers so they cannot see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God. For we are not proclaiming ourselves but Jesus Christ as Lord, and ourselves as your servants because of Jesus. For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, has shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the person of Jesus Christ."

Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to Madison Square Gardens for the World Heavyweight Championship. Introducing in this corner, the reigning world champion from Jew York City... Pessimism. And in the other corner, the contender hailing from New Jerusalem... Optimism. Well, you know I'm hamming it up a bit, but I wanted to convey the great fight before us. This is 2017, which could be called the year of the epic brawl between Jacob-Israel and Esau-Edom. Today is March 19th and in four days (3-23-17) we will begin to launch the first rounds of firepower in spiritual warfare against the pride and haughtiness of the Mainstream Media followed by 39 other days of unrelenting imprecatory salvos heard in the Court of Divine Justice, which of course is much higher than the Supreme Court, because it is adjudicated upon by Almighty God. It's going to be one hell of a main event. For the good and faithful Israelite, it's all positive Christianity. It doesn't get any better than that. I have gotten nothing but affirmation for our imprecatory campaign. Nobody in Christian Identity is whining about how it's going to get worse. Well, maybe for the jews and their shabbez goy things aren't working out as they thought they would under the Protocols of Satan.

For those who say it's going to get worse before it gets better, let me just say, "Give me a break." I just find doom and gloom boring. Conversely, I find David's well placed sling shot between the eyes of Goliath exhilarating and inspirational. Indulge me for a moment while I paraphrase Mt. 24:5: "Many shall come yapping their mouths as some kind of expert giving Christianity lip service... and shall deceive many (causing our people to err)." It occurs to me that those who heed the Lord's warning and avoid babbling buffoons must be what constitute the Remnant, who see things in an entirely different perspective than most people.

Surrender to the enemies of The Christ is not in the vocabulary of onward Christian soldiers. The only thing we surrender is our hearts and minds to the will and purposes of our God. Every now and then I hear of somebody in our movement who throws in the towel, thinking the battle is lost, this generation is lost, and our people have lost their minds and thus any hope for the future. What they usually don't consider is that our people have lost their spiritual direction and moral compass. We are appropriately called the lost sheep of the house of Israel. But that does not mean the Holy Spirit has disappeared. It just means our faith is temporarily waning in the fog of Babylon. We're going to clear things up.

Our dilemma is a mockery of the truth, the way and the life, and subsequently a persecution of those who are supposed to be bearing witness of that truth. If you have the mind of Christ and dare to follow Him, you are a disciple and will garner the trials and tribulations of a dissident racist. What's weird is that some White people don't even know that genocide is staring them right in the face. Some of the most beautiful White women in the world are being pawed and paraded around by the darkest and ugliest sub-humans flaunting their lifestyle on TV, in stores and on the street. This epidemic reveals itself with half-tone, brillo-headed children of darkness, cradled in the arms of mon-grelized motherhood. The Jewish media is milking the interracial meme in every venue, rubbing our collective shame in their doctrine of Balaam.

But I want to tell you today that hope is not dead and all is not lost. The glory of God almost always works in lopsided numbers, so that we don't take credit for what the Remnant resolves. It was just one young faithful lad (David) who brought down the ominous palooka (Goliath). The majority of people today don't seem to care about the giants of industry and the captains of commerce, who are the merchants of the earth; who feed the mystery religions and make war with the saints. Well, I care about the God of Israel and His Word and I know there are a few others who feel the same way. We're a minority group. And yet, we all know that we have the transforming power of Holy Spirit that no other race of people on the face of the earth have. We alone have the light of Jesus the Christ, because we are the children of light.

So, we have the "many" and the "few". Many will think David got a lucky shot off that brought the giant down, whereas a few people realize that it was a supernatural synchronization of elements far and above anything having to do with luck. So we have a majority and minority opinion.

Mt. 7:14 states, "The few there be that find it." Find what? The way leading unto life! ... The half full glass of water and the thought that it's going to get better for the believers in Jesus Christ no matter what happens, because we have some promises from the Creator of the Universe that no other race has. God has not changed His mind as to who is His designated battle ax and weapons of war; for with us will He break in pieces the nations and destroy kingdoms and defeat the shepherd and his flock, meaning the false church (Jer. 51:20, 23). How? David and Goliath. We may be losing battles, but that does not mean we will lose the war. It's no big deal for us to stand up against the New York Times or CNN. They've been given a one week notice to cease and desist 'fake news.' I believe we are going to witness the Mainstream Media cursed like never before. As Jesus declared "Woe unto you scribes... hypocrites, You keep locking people out of the kingdom of heaven! For you neither enter nor permit those trying to enter to go in" Mt. 23:13.

We can "Be of good cheer" (John 16:33) having consolation in just one Scripture among thousands, when everything and everyone else has failed us and that is Romans 8:31 which says, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Think about it. What good does it do to stew in our juices and fret with worry over these hypothetical worst-case scenarios or even the very real threat of becoming a statistical demographic? Indeed, "Be transformed by the renewing of your mind" (Romans 12:2). What more could we want in life? If the truth shall make us free, we should be free from the things we're told are going to get worse. The truth is, it may get worse for those who are not yet free.

There's a lot of people in bondage to the Rapture theory that makes some think they've got their ticket to heaven. Everything will get better once they float off to outer space, while the rest of us on earth are left behind and then things are really, really going to get worse. Really? How many retarded prophets does it take before people stone them to death? Well, here we go again. The Rapture business has been slowing down lately, so some charlatans have set a new date based on Rev. 12:1 i.e., the sun, the moon and twelve stars, all of which is yet another planetary alignment on Sept. 23, 2017. From a Christian Identity perspective, the woman in this verse is a generalization of Israel and the twelve stars are specifically the twelve tribes.

Of course, Jesus could not have been born had there been no Israel to fulfill the prophecy, which the Rapture crowd always confuses with the bad figs of Judah who adulterated their seedline. But even more significantly, as far as Christ is concerned, is the race of people He came for, the manchild. Many believe this to be the Christ, but Isaiah 66:7-8 tells us the manchild is a nation; one that is born in a day. I believe that nation is America, which has become the regathering place for the twelve tribes of Israel i.e., White Europeans who migrated here. And with that manifestation of God's Covenant People in the greatest Christian nation in history, comes the enemies of God to destroy them with strangers (non-Israelites) and their strange gods such as: the pernicious, universalist, antichrist Rapture doctrine that keeps beating its drum like the Energizer Bunny. But, I can tell you that their battery is going to die and when it does, things are going to really, really get better; and if you're Christian Identity, it already has.

Many may be in bondage, because there are few crusaders for the truth. "The harvest is plentiful, but the labourers are few" Mt. 9:37. If God is for His Remnant, who or what can stop their work? Mt. 10:28 tells us, "Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul, but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body." The word 'soul' here is in context to the very essence of life, our Christian personality in service to God. The question of adversity or adversaries is answered in the following verse, "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not freely give us all things with Him?" If a person gives the choicest thing he has to buy or obtain you, is there anything in his assets that he would not give to keep and accomplish his ultimate objective in and through you? No, of course not!

God gave His only begotten son, His chief asset by far, for our redemption; to keep His sacrifice on the Cross from being fruitless. God will not refuse us anything that fits within His overall plan. "Who will bring a charge against God's elect? God is the one who justifies. Who is the one who condemns? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen, who is even at the right hand of God, who also intercedes for us" Romans 8:33-34. Paul just told us that Jesus is our intercessor. In other words, someone who will do for us what we can't do for ourselves. We are about to embark on a national campaign of prayer and fasting for one thing... divine intervention. That always means things are going to get better. It doesn't necessarily mean within our time frame, but at God's appointed time.

This isn't a sermon on predestination, but it addresses our attitude towards God's timetable ... His scheduled plan for the ages. Those with the wrong attitude see nothing to be optimistic about. But "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purposes. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren" Romans 8:28-29. Can we conclude from these verses that all things don't work together for good for the majority of our brethren because they're not called (yet) and their love of God is lacking? That may be a contributing factor as to why some people think it's going to get worse before it gets better. They can hear the Word, but do nothing but wait for a Rapture or just watch everything go to hell.

Who would dare to have the audacity to bring charges or accusations against God's crusaders of truth? It would be those who have no love of the truth and willingly choose to believe a lie. They have crusaders too ... that work for deception! When we're justified it means that we're not right all by ourselves, but rather when the righteousness of Christ is imputed to us. In other words, we are right when an attribute of Christ's character is transferred to our serving God and acting upon His Word. As we read to the end of Romans 8, there isn't anything that separates us from Jesus; not tribulation or distress or persecution or famine or any threat of danger including that vile Talmudic filth, as it is written in their book, that we, the White race, are "accounted as sheep for the slaughter" (v. 36).

But, do you know what? In all of these things, "we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" (v. 37). Paul was persuaded, as should we, that "neither death or life, messengers or rulers, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor any other creature will be able to separate us from the love of Jesus Christ" (v. 38). Did you get that "Nor things to come"? There's your impediment and declaration that 'it's going to get worse before it gets better'. How can any Christian who believes "We are more than conquerors" not say 'it's going to get better'? What an insulting affront to these reassuring words from God for someone to say, 'it's going to get worse'. Is that what the "good news" conveys?

I mentioned in the previous message that if one is empty of hope and full of despair, there's a good chance one is predisposed to Murphy's Law and I then followed up with II Cor. 4:6 suggesting we are winners, not losers. Let's take this concept of 'things getting better' for the believer in context. But first, let me ask you if you want things to get better? Let's see a show of hands. How many of you want things to get worse? By golly, I think we're beginning to see some Christian unity!

Corinth was Paul's problem church. He spent more time and thought on this church than any other, because of their association with immoral brethren. Paul had to pay a visit to Corinth, because the troublemakers wouldn't shut up. After Titus reported to Paul that things were getting better, Paul wrote another letter that was more joyful than the first letter of admonitions. II Corinthians is the encouraging letter of reconciliation. Chapter 4 deals with the work of the ministry. Paul has spoken to them before about ministers in 2:17, that we should not be as many who corrupt the Word of God, but rather commissioned by God to speak sincerely in Christ.

Paul is not addressing a cadre of professional pulpit pounders. He's talking to an ecclesia, the called out men of the White race, who have the unity of their calling and know what the real work and purpose of God is supposed to be. I'm often asked where I got ordained as a minister and by what Bible College or Theological Seminary. And I tell them my only ordination is the same as the Disciples who were also without portfolio. I don't need a piece of paper or diploma to tell me that I am called or that I love God. In fact, most of the ecclesia in Christian Identity is self-taught and more circumspect than pampered, judaized, for-profit "pastors." Thank God I was never instructed by some Jewish professor teaching the traditions of man as a substitute for the Gospels in so called Christian schools.

Let's start reading II Cor. 4:1 and learn how things can only get better, "Therefore seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not." At times, getting the message out there may be frustrating or discouraging, but the messenger refuses to have his spirit extinguished. Verse 2, "But we have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness or adulterating the Word of God, but by the manifestation of truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." We speak openly about God and man without fear of recrimination or even that facial expression you get from some people. It may not be what people want to hear, but it must be said. One can't plead ignorance if they've been given legal notice.

II Cor. 4:3-4 (KJV): "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." Verse 3 in the FF is rendered, "And if our good news is veiled, it is veiled to the perishing; in whom the god of this age has darkened the thoughts with unbelief, so that they cannot perceive the light."

Our movement is to wake our people up; not that we're a dying race, but so that we can live. Christ came for our race, not to bury us, but to let us be born again or more precisely to inform our kindred that we are 'begotten from above'. Christianity is all about things getting better for the lost sheep of the house of Israel, but some of our kindred insist upon remaining lost. These verses address those people. Now many will say that the "god" of this world is Satan, however the 1611 KJV capitalized God, so it isn't the devil that blinds if we are to harmonize Scripture. Prov. 25:2 says, "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing." Some people will not hear the truth. Why? As Mt. 13:22 tells it, the carnal nature of man chokes the Word and thus he becomes unfruitful. Man may hear the legal notice, but just doesn't take it to heart.

What does Jesus Christ, our Kinsman Redeemer, say to this type of person? He accommodates the desires of their heart according to John 12:40, "He [the Lord, not the devil] hath blinded their eyes and hardened their heart, that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them." The very same reason was given as to why the Pharisees could not understand His parables. Well now, some people might think, how cruel of God to circumvent someone's salvation. However, the honor, or shall we say dishonor, belongs entirely with those who only care about their own worldly desires. They serve no useful purpose in God's plan for the ages and are thus perishable. No wonder, they can only think things are going to get worse if they have self-imposed darkness upon themselves.

And guess what? The more light you have, the less darkness there is. Some of our own people shudder to think that God's Laws will be imposed upon the land, as if that would be worse than the legal plunder of mongrel laws of the land being imposed upon us right now. Even a little bit of light dispels the dark. Ladies and gentlemen, I submit to you that we are not a dark people.

II Cor. 4:5-6, "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake. For God, who commanded the light to shine out of the darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the person of Jesus Anointed." The best sermon is the one that leaves an impression of Jesus, not the preacher. Most preachers' sermons are forgotten the following week. But who can forget those special moments when God made contact with you and you had a spiritual awakening? Our race is starving in a famine for divine sustenance, where the Spirit of God makes permanent changes for the betterment of our lives. God deserves much more glory than what He's been getting.

Listen to this: if Jesus is proclaimed Lord, and by that I mean the sovereign authority of our lives, then we cannot remain in the status quo; we are out of the dark and into His marvelous light. The reality of Christ supersedes old attitudes of doubt, because we now have a love of truth, which will free us from the past. We serve our kinsmen according to race, because of Jesus. Without Christ, there would be no sacred bond or divine responsibility to our own kind. Most White 'radical right' organizations I've observed have a short shelf life, because they've failed to focus on what their motivation is. Most of the time, they're not motivated by a Christian ethic. Somebody, "Changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator" (Romans 1:25). Enter confusion, and treating the symptoms rather than the cause.

Some people get real hot and bothered when you bring Christianity into politics, especially Jews, since they've latched themselves upon the monopoly of a two-party system like a parasite; always whining about 'separation of church and state' i.e. God from government. But, it is not impossible to de-worm our nation. The antidote to our political woes is spiritual. You can take any political issue in America that is going from bad to worse and you can rectify the doom and gloom with the Spirit of God's Word. As soon as you compromise the motives of the government of Jesus with the government of man, you've taken the absolutes of perfection to the level of theory and experimentation. I don't know about you, but I don't want to be a guinea pig for some social engineers. Just look at how much the grand experiment of desegregation of schools has cost us.

We have to fight to obey God rather than man and that starts with our spirit. Our spirit is our motive for doing things and is the engine that animates our faith. Faith without works is dead. It's almost as if some of our people are working against God. Consequently, we can see how this lack of godly motivation lends itself to things getting progressively worse. Conversely, we can see how a spiritual direction can lead to reversing a curse into a blessing. This is not a theological hypothesis, but rather the reality of history.

If you want to talk about the survival of our race and a future for White children, then it is critically important that we get the right Jesus, because many shall come in His name saying they have the real Anointed/Anointing, but will deceive many (Mark 13:6). They did it with the god of integration who loves all the little coloured children. The God of segregation was ignored and things got worse for many. However, for a few Christian families, things got better because they separated themselves from the evil; from the 'good for nothing.' I don't think I need to dignify the religions of atheism or secular humanism in this regard as both represent the Jewish enemy and are anathema to the White race and Christianity.

II Cor. 4:7: "But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us." In ancient times, gold and silver were hidden in clay pots. God is the potter and we are the clay. This verse is talking about the spiritual blessings that God has invested in our race. This is talking about the only dynamics of White Power that can ever be manifested. Paul was always near danger and death, yet his weakness shows that the power belongs to God, not to his own strength or genius.

Gideon must have felt this exhilaration of God's power when his militia was reduced from 32,000 to 300 to defeat the host of Midian. Our guys stood their ground and the Midianite army ran retreating and cried with great fear as the 300 pursued them with a mighty sword. I'd say that every single man in Gideon's militia had the perception that things were going to get better before they got even better; going from a glass half full to a cup that runneth over. If God be for us, who in their right mind can be against us? The fact is, their mind is not right. The great irony is that the inmates are running the asylum. They are motivated by paranoia and arrogance. They can't think beyond the dollar.

II Cor. 4:8-9: "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed, we are perplexed, but not in despair."

Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast out, but not destroyed." I've maintained for a long time that if our adversaries revile and persecute us and say all manner of evil against us falsely because we stand with Jesus (Mt. 5:11), then we must be doing something right. And because of that we're told to, "Rejoice and be exceeding glad" (Mt. 5:12). How can any White Christian patriot do that, if he or she thinks things are getting worse? Mt. 10:22 assures us, "Ye shall be hated of all men for My name's sake [i.e., authority], but he that endureth to the end shall be saved."

It can be depressing when so many people don't understand the Identity message, but that's part of the package that God has planned for us. After all, the Bible says we are a stiff-necked people, blind and deaf (Ex. 33:3; Is. 42:19). Prophetic Manasseh (one of the tribes of Israel, which many Identity scholars believe to be America), means 'forgetfulness'. White Christian America has almost forgotten what it means to be a disciple of Christ. It means discipline. But how many of our people today actually read, believe and obey the Word of God? It's so much easier to wave the white flag of surrender and confess that things are going to hell in a hand basket, than it is to follow the daily dictates of the one and only social chaos survival guide, which we call the Bible.

Acts 14:22 professes, "Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God." When we dare to obey God, He will navigate us through the social chaos, through the valley of the shadow of death. But why do we have to have our hearts, our attitudes adjusted to tribulation? Romans 5:3-4 says, "We glory in tribulation also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience, experience; and experience, hope."

What hope? Hope for the spiritually dead whom Jesus died for. Hope for those who think it's going to get better. Hope for those who don't have a clue. Hope for our children, grandchildren and their posterity.

God "Is able to keep us from falling" (Jude 1:24) into the deep abyss of no return. He will rescue us from the deepest pits of discouragement or that which tries to deprive us of courage. How? We're told in Gal. 6:2 "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Christianity is a plurality of ecclesias - the called out ones - those who have heard their calling and respond, comprise the body politic, the political government of Christ.

White Power is such that not one brother or sister in Anointing is overburdened and stumbles. White Power is not for self, but for others. The unity of Christian fellowship is more important than an organization that compromises principle. We can no longer experiment with our children's future by adulterating the one and only movement which is of God to overcome the world. It cannot be hijacked or netjacked with secular platitudes. This anti-Christian sentiment has emasculated the movement for the last several years from the philosophical gods of the internet. Things have gotten worse for our race and nation because this insidious influence of bastardizing White Power has been given a free pass. But, it's not the pass that will allow entrance into the Kingdom of God. God said, "He that is not with Me is against Me" Mt. 12:30. This is talking about White people who had a chance to become Christians but rejected their calling for things to get better God's way. In fact, things will get worse for them as, "The children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Mt. 8:12). The politics of man and the politics of God just don't mix.

The movement will move in spite of the drag that slows things down, "In whom all the building fitly framed together grows into a holy temple in the Lord; In whom you also are being built together into the place where the Spirit of God dwelleth" Eph. 2:21-22. And there we will 'occupy' or be about our Father's business 'til He comes' (Luke 19:13). Things are going to get better as we see each other bring forth the fruits of the Holy Spirit: love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance (Gal. 5:22). These virtues prepare our race as a bride readies herself for a wedding (Rev. 19:7). Jesus is coming for His bride arrayed in White robes without spot or wrinkle (Eph. 5:27; Rev. 7:14).

So you see, there's really no excuse for the Christian to think things are going to get worse when we're told that we should be "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil" (Eph. 5:16). In other words, we may live in a wicked time, yet we should invest in every opportunity to bring forth the Good News. Seize each moment for Christ and it will be impossible to perceive of things getting worse before it gets better. Indeed, there is a divine priority in motion and it's our movement, although all sorts of heresies and abominations try to attach themselves to it. Mark the words of Malachi 1:4, "They shall build, but I [the Lord] will throw down." And Ps. 127:1 emphatically states, "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it."

Let's finish reading II Cor. 4:15-18, "For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through thanksgiving of many overflow to the glory of God." Continuing in the Ferrar Fenton, "We do not therefore act like cowards, but even if our outward man is exhausted, yet our inward is renewed day by day. For the fleeting trifle of our sufferings will acquire to us, in an immeasurable eternity, an unsurpassed load of glory; we're not looking at the seen, but at the unseen; for the seen is temporary, but the unseen is eternal." Paul is saying 'I know that I'm in constant danger and I'm wearing myself out working so hard, but so what? Death will not destroy me; it will only bring me closer to the Lord'. Paul is growing weaker every day, yet inwardly, spiritually, he keeps forever young. He dismisses all of his great hardships as slight momentary afflictions, all in preparation for an eternal weight of glory so great that our minds are not capable of knowing what God has in store for us in the next age.

The next paradigm shift coming will be the last and greatest of all. For "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable" (I Cor. 15:19). What good does it do to dwell upon the sky falling every day? "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God" Romans 12:2. That's what I meant when I said, "It's going to get better, before it gets even better." There are many bleak reports about the demise of our race and the hopelessly false teachings of judeo-churchianity regarding the future. But, thank God, my Bible says, "Give no credence to jewish fables and commandments of men that turn from the truth" (Titus 1:14). I'll close with the opening salutation of James, "A servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad... greetings my brethren, count it all joy."

Question:

Why do ministers always urge us to spend more time on the Scriptures? The basics of the Gospel are simple, and I see no point in going over and over the fundamentals. Is there some magic in Scripture reading?

My Answer by Billy Graham:

J. Edgar Hoover once said: "the Communists' emphasis on keeping to the original sources of their beliefs. The faithful Communist reads Marx and Lenin constantly on a daily or weekly schedule."

And you ask about the 'Greatest Book in the world' "why must we keep going over and over the fundamentals"? The ignorance of the average professing Christian of the Bible teaching is astounding. We know more about Maverick [TV western] than we do about the Master; and we know more about Paladin [another TV western] than Paul. Yes, there is a magic in going over and over the Scriptures. They become food for the soul. John said: "I esteemed His Word more than my necessary food." If you, were constantly reading and obeying the Scriptures, you would not have even asked your question.

PORT ARTHUR MYSTERIES

Since my series of reports on Port Arthur were published I have received a number of letters from the public, mostly sporting shooters, correctly sensing they were set-up and asking what to do next. It is a very good question. Forget appeals to the media and forget judicial reviews of events. The media will ignore you, and any judicial review controlled by government will be manipulated into an orchestrated whitewash closely akin to the Warren Commission in Dallas.

As a first step, pressure should be exerted on your federal and state representatives to ask formal questions in Parliament. This will result in your demands for actions being recorded in Hansard, which is important because recalcitrant politicians hate unwanted matters recorded on official documents. Include copies of my reports and refer to them in writing, thereby removing your elected representative's ability to later argue that he or she had no idea what you were talking about. Ram the harsh reality of Port Arthur down the gullets of every fat-cat in Canberra until they start gagging on the facts.

If Australian sporting shooters wish to clear their collective names they will have to agree to a strategy which reverses the psyop illusion at Port Arthur. Ultimately civil legal action will almost certainly be needed to shake Canberra out of its terminal apathy, and its blatant subservience to minority lobby groups.

Time is the biggest enemy. If the Libyans had known about the American psyop shortly after WPC Fletcher's murder in London and had swiftly mounted a civil action against the British Government, considerable embarrassment would have ensued, perhaps enough to stall the attack on Tripoli and the downing of Pan Am 103. But they took no aggressive legal action, and twelve years of subtle media reinforcement later, are nowadays viewed in the west as a nation populated entirely by terrorists. Always remember the media turns fiction into fact as readily as it turns fact into fiction.

Riding piggyback on the atrocity at Port Arthur, the lobbies and politicians are currently setting up Australian sporting shooters as internal redneck terrorists, and if no aggressive defensive legal action is taken I can confidently predict that within months or years another psyop will be executed in Australia; this time using semi-automatic handguns and revolvers, aimed at introducing legislation that will outlaw all such weapons for ever. Do you really want that? No you do not, and there are four million other sporting shooters like you with more than enough collective voting power and funding to stop it happening.

As my second report suggested, the first objective must be that of proving Martin Bryant was innocent of the murders at Port Arthur. This is critically important because until that is achieved his presence in prison will be used as "proof" that firearms are too dangerous to be held by those members of the public who in time of war train and supplement our defence forces. How you feel about Martin Bryant personally is not an issue. Like him or not, Bryant is currently being held aloft by politicians and lobbies as a psyop 'flag' proving the legitimacy of their legislation, which undermined Australian national security.

Proving Bryant innocent will remove that flag completely, and with it the justification for introducing the illegal legislation in the first place. Critically, at the same time it will prove by default that Australia was attacked by an armed external interest group, opening the way to repeal the legislation on the legitimate grounds that Australia needs more rather than less defensive weapons in the community to withstand future attacks on our nation and people. The Swiss defence model is an excellent example of what all sporting shooters should strive to achieve.

Before that, an independent investigation must be carried out in Tasmania to prepare the legal bullets for the lawyers to fire at the Federal Government in Canberra. If you want to win, those bullets must be solid silver and obtaining them will be expensive. Investigating matters that government does not want investigated can be extremely difficult and expensive as I found out with Yvonne Fletcher's murder in London. In the end the cost of that investigation alone ran to several hundred thousand dollars, and similar costs can be anticipated if the mass murder at Port Arthur is to be investigated properly.

Somehow or other funds will have to be raised, and though I am a more than adequate investigator I wouldn't have a clue where to start raising funds of this magnitude. Logic suggests that a 200,000 strong demonstration in Sydney or Brisbane where everyone throws in two dollars in the pot would be a good place to start but, again, I am not an expert. If any philanthropic multi-millionaires reading this item wish to short-circuit the process by chucking in a few semi-trailer loads of banknotes, that's OK as well.

Finally I must point out that so far I have personally funded the investigation work into Port Arthur and have received no payments for the publication of copyright reports from any other source. This was done willingly, because every Australian has the right to know that government and media alike have conspired to pervert the course of justice in the case of the mass murder of thirty five Australian citizens on Australian sovereign territory, but I cannot justify spending any more of our limited family funds on the matter. Therefore anyone writing me in future who would like to receive a reply is asked to enclose a post office money order made out to "J. Vialls," sufficient to cover the cost of computer disposables, stationery, and postage.

TASMANIA'S SECOND PATSY: GUN DEALER TERRY HILL

Two days after the massacre at Port Arthur in April 1996, gun dealer Terry Hill of New Town, Tasmania, saw a photo of a man on the front page of his local newspaper, reportedly connected with the mass murder. Hill recognized the man as "Martin RYAN" who had earlier visited his dealership, and swiftly contacted police. Unfortunately for him, Terry Hill was unaware that the Tasmanian Government had thirty five corpses, one possible suspect, but no supplier of the weapons allegedly used in the massacre. It was one of the biggest holes in the Government's impossible case against Martin Bryant, but a hole that could be filled in very neatly by sacrificing Terry Hill on the altar of political expediency.

On 27 March 1996 Terry Hill and assistant Greg Peck were working at "Guns and Ammo" in New Town, Tasmania, when the door opened and a tall man with long blonde hair walked in carrying a package wrapped in a towel. Known to Terry Hill only as Martin, the man muttered that "something was wrong with it" and promptly handed the package muzzle-first across the counter. When Terry Hill unwrapped the towel he found that "it" was an AR 10 assault rifle fitted with a clip containing 15 live rounds of high velocity .308 (7.62-mm NATO) ammunition. Horrified, Hill removed the clip and worked the action, at which point another live round ejected from the breech. "Martin" had calmly walked into the store with a fully-loaded and unsafe assault weapon, blissfully unaware he had done anything wrong. His actions that morning demonstrated with chilling clarity that "Martin" had absolutely no idea how to load, cock, aim, fire, or unload, assault weapons of any kind.

Despite this staggering lack of knowledge, thirty two days later the Tasmanian Government tried to convince the world that "Martin" had entered the Broad Arrow cafe at Port Arthur, and with the panache usually reserved for top special forces combat shooters, shot 32 victims. 20 of them dead, in less than 90 seconds with a Colt AR15 Commando. After that, the clumsy inept Martin is alleged to have left the cafe, deftly changed weapons to a heavier Belgian FN FAL with completely different loading and cocking mechanisms, and used it to kill or wound another 25 people. Both weapons were so well maintained and tuned that neither one faltered or jammed during the entire 14.5 minute operation at Port Arthur. As proved scientifically in "Was Martin Bryant Really a Lone Nut Assassin?" parts one and two, written by this author, whoever prepared and fired those weapons was not Martin Bryant at all, but an expert combat shooter with special forced counter-terrorist experience.

Back at "Guns and Ammo" in New Town during late May this was still in the future, as a shaken Terry Hill stared aghast at the neat pile of high velocity rounds on his counter. Did Martin have a license? Yes he did, one of the newer photographic licenses, endorsed for prohibited and automatic firearms. In a statement to police Hill confirmed the first name was Martin, and so far as he could remember, the surname was RYAN. Under the gun laws existing before the massacre Hill was not required to write down license details unless selling a weapon, and thus did not do so, but he has sworn statements from other witnesses that Martin produced his license in their presence. The Dutch AR10, serial number 001590, was in very poor condition and Hill wanted to retain it at the shop for safety. Receiving no instructions for repairs, Terry Hill asked Martin to return after Easter.

Over the next month Martin made several visits to Guns and Ammo, purchasing items that did not require details of his license to be recorded. These purchases included several gun cases and finally, on 24 April 1996, four days before the massacre, three boxes of Winchester double-x magnum shotgun shells, code number X12XC. But at no time before or since did Terry Hill sell Martin any weapons, or ammunition of .223 Remington or .308 Winchester calibers, as used in the mass murder on 28 April 1996. Martin had lived in the New Town area for many years but was not a regular customer at Guns and Ammo, so why did he suddenly start purchasing multiple innocuous goods from Terry Hill in the months immediately preceding the massacre at Port Arthur?

The most likely answer in intelligence parlance is that someone asked Martin to go and buy the various items mentioned in order to build a "legend," designed to ensure that after the massacre a direct association would be made between Martin Bryant and a recognized gun-dealer as the "supplier" of the weapons used at Port Arthur. There is other evidence indicating this was the case. Long before the massacre took place, Martin Bryant's unaccompanied baggage was searched on entry to Australia and two pornographic videos seized. As the baggage was literally unaccompanied, anyone could have placed the pornographic tapes in the suitcase and then tipped-off Customs about its "obscene" contents.

On another occasion Bryant was arrested on entry to Australia on "information received," and taken to Melbourne Hospital for an internal examination on the suspicion of drug trafficking. He was found innocent of any offence and released. On a third occasion there was an alleged "incident" in Hereford, England, which was reported to the police because Hereford is the home of the British Special Air Service (SAS). Once again Bryant was completely innocent of any wrongdoing, but by then the international computers were building a very convincing legend indeed.

By the date of the massacre at Port Arthur through no fault of his own, a computer search would have shown a string of warning flags indicating that Martin Bryant was a possible drug trafficker and purveyor of pornographic materials, and perhaps someone who had shown an unhealthy interest in the activities of Britain's premier counter-terrorist unit. Add all of that to his frequent visits to Guns and Ammo during March and April 1996, and the Tasmanian Police Service would have needed to be superhuman to resist the implied legendary "proof" that Martin Bryant was its man. Unfortunately Terry Hill was completely unaware of these computer manipulations when he did his duty as a responsible citizen on 30 April 1996, and reported his knowledge of Martin to police. It was at that point that his life and the lives of his family started to slowly come apart at the seams. Members of the police insisted that he must have sold the weapons and ammunition to Bryant, and made similar "off the record" accusations to the Tasmanian media, but Hill refused to budge. Why on earth admit to selling weapons and ammunition to Bryant when he had not done so?

That later sordid attacks on Hill were political initiatives is beyond question. Terry Hill had a valid gun dealer's license, and witnesses to the fact that Martin had shown a valid gun license to him. He was thus fully entitled to sell any weapon to Martin without committing any offence at

STORIES OF LOST ISRAEL IN FOLKLORE

Rev. James B. Haggart

For many of the stories tie in very closely with the stories of the Bible. They are particularly valuable to us for their preservation of the racial heritage which reaches back to the times of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the Patriarchs of the Old Testament. They give evidence of the highly Christian character of the Saxon people, as these stories are saturated with Bible truths. Except for the efforts of the brothers Grimm more than 200 stories might have been lost forever to posterity.

all under Tasmanian law, and would have admitted doing so in his statement if it were true. But it was not true, and Terry Hill was not prepared to “help the police” by signing a statement that amounted to an outright lie.

Things went quiet for a while and then Hill was interviewed by police in the presence of a lawyer on 6 June 1996. As he had always done, Hill maintained that he had not at any time sold weapons or rifle ammunition to Martin Bryant (or Ryan) and would not be changing his truthful stand. Unfortunately pressure seemed to be mounting, perhaps at senior Tasmanian Government levels, to incriminate Hill at any cost, and he immediately received a letter from the attending lawyer, containing the following comments:

“.....In a private conversation that was had between the writer and Inspector xxxxx, Inspector xxxxx made it abundantly clear that police have very strong evidence to suggest that you did in fact sell guns to Bryant and unless you are prepared to in effect change your story, they will press on and try and find sufficient evidence to charge you with some offences.

“However, it was also made abundantly clear that the Director of Public Prosecutions is prepared to offer you an indemnity against prosecution if you are prepared to accept that you did sell guns to Bryant ...”

The letter was crude and revealing. By saying the police would “press on and try to find sufficient evidence to charge you with some offences,” the writer admitted that police had no evidence whatever against Terry Hill. If they had, in a matter as serious as this they would have already charged him with one of several criminal offences. But Terry Hill was never charged at all, making a mockery of the police threats. That the offer of an indemnity was guaranteed by the DPP is especially telling in terms of who was applying the blowtorch to police in an attempt to coerce a false confession out of Hill. The office of DPP is a political appointment, and agreement for the indemnity against prosecution was thus a political decision made by government.

The legal letter delivered to Terry Hill on Friday 7 June advised that the Tasmanian Police would be expecting an answer no later than the following Wednesday, 12 June. There seemed no point in delaying the matter, so Hill called his lawyer on Monday 10 June and said there would be no statement of the sort requested by the police. Terry Hill also had other things to worry about. His mother, Alma, was terminally ill and not expected to live for many more days. On Thursday 13 June, Hill received a call from the hospital requesting his immediate attendance at her bedside, and was forced to depart Guns and Ammo immediately, leaving his wife Dorothy alone to cope with police who simultaneously arrived at the store to carry out a “snap inspection.” And so it was that the police found a number of technical reasons to revoke Terry Hill’s gun dealer’s license, while he sat powerless beside his dying mother’s bedside at the local hospital. Alma finally passed away at 6:03 am the following morning.

It is of course possible for any government regulatory body to find sufficient technical reasons to close down any business at any time, provided there is sufficient political will to do so. There is a copy of the “Notice of Cancellation of Gun Dealer’s License No 54546” on the desk beside me as I write this report, and it must be said that it records some items which under normal circumstances might have attracted an infringement notice calling for action within a specified time period. But not for Hill. Instead, his license was revoked and his livelihood destroyed. Terry Hill would have been less than human if he had not glanced again at the legal letter sent to him just one week earlier, which warned quite coldly that if he did not admit to selling weapons to Martin Bryant, the police would “press on and try to find sufficient evidence to charge you with some offences.”

More than a year later in July 1997 the situation was to worsen, but why all the fuss, and why the continual persecution of Terry Hill, a man who had every reason to tell the truth and none at all to lie? The answer lies in the critical importance of proving that Martin Bryant had access to, and used, two high velocity assault rifles which could not be backtracked to anyone on the island of Tasmania or on the Australian mainland.

The police had no credible proof at all that Bryant fired either weapon at Port Arthur; they had no ballistic cross-matches between the weapons in question and the bullets found in the victims; they had no fingerprints proving an association between Martin Bryant and the weapons, or between Martin Bryant and the Broad Arrow Cafe where the massacre was initiated. By any standard then, the government should have long ago announced these harsh but accurate facts, and further announced its intention to hunt down those who did have access to (and ownership of) the weapons most likely to have been used in the mass murder.

At the political level such an honest move would be seen as quite unacceptable, leaving as it would several politicians with egg all over the faces. Admitting that you had locked up the wrong man while the guilty parties were probably sunning themselves in the Bahamas was simply too hard and, anyway, who gave a damn about Martin Bryant? But no matter the blast of continuous media myth assuring us of his guilt, there was still the impossible matter of proving once and for all that the two known assault weapons were Martin Bryant’s as provided by “somebody.” Which somebody? Terry Hill of course, as Tasmanian Legal Aid finally decided to try and prove in an unprecedented “back door” civil legal action launched on 31 July 1997, when taxpayer funds were suddenly allocated to a plaintiff to take action against Terry Hill, a man who has never been charged with any criminal offense. Cracks were appearing in the official government version of events, and someone somewhere was determined to paper them over with taxpayer banknotes.

For any government to allow such a desperate and absurd case to proceed is a deliberate misuse of public funds, and has the potential to create an incredibly dangerous legal precedent. The rationale for the civil suit is that the plaintiff was injured by a bullet fired at Port Arthur, and is suing Terry Hill for damages for negligence and breach of statutory duty; for allegedly selling Martin Bryant an AR15 military-style rifle, a scope, and around 250 rounds of ammunition. For doing WHAT? The Tasmanian police have already proved via the legal letter to Terry Hill that there is absolutely no evidence to support such a claim for, if there was, they would unquestionably have pressed criminal charges.

Even if Terry Hill had sold Martin Bryant the weapons, which he did not, it would have been an entirely legal

WAITING FOR THE 'RIGHT' DISASTER TO HAPPEN
The following is a part extract from an article in "The Strategy" June 1996.
Evidence shows that the document (Proposed Uniform Gun Laws) was already designed just waiting for the 'right' disaster to happen whereby all the States would be readily in agreement and allow the Commonwealth to take over yet another State 'controlled area' and so further weakening the States.
Further evidence (that the Labor and Coalition agenda's are the same as this gun control document) shows in the fact that Tasmania was even 'prophesied' as being the State it would have to happen in for these uniform (all States) gun laws to become possible.
As reported in THE SUN HERALD, May 5, 1996 premier of NSW, Barry Unsworth made this prediction in 1987. Before uniform gunlaws become possible in all states there will have to be a massacre in Tasmania.
Allegedly, similar comments at the same time were attributed to at least one other premier, and possibly two.
On a Channel 7 TV Programme just after a Vietnamese gang war in Cabramatta and when the TV crew purchased self loading rifles in Tasmania and graphically demonstrated their fire power to the public and of course any of the mentally deranged who 'happened' to be watching.
A Mr. Roland Brown of the Tasmanian Coalition for Gun Control made the following statement. "We are going to see a mass shooting in Tasmania of the likes you have seen in Strathfield and Hoddle Street, unless we get National Gun Control Laws". End extract.

Chalcedon president Mark Rushdoony says complaints made to the server are "trying to blackmail these business entities from doing business with us; stop hosting our server, cut it off." Many such complaints have been made over the years, he added, but lately there have been "more attempts than in the past."

suitability of the applicant for the license, and thus the right to use those weapons. Under such circumstances, allowing this case to proceed would be exactly the same as allowing a case to be brought against a licensed car dealer, for selling a car to a licensed driver, who then drove off and killed somebody in the street. Once the transaction was complete the licensed car dealer would no longer be involved. And what about a farmer who sells wheat to a cereal manufacturer, who makes a mistake with his production process and kills someone with a bowl of Wheaty Bran? Do we sue the farmer for damages and statutory negligence? Of course not, because we are clearly not as unhinged as some members of the Tasmanian bureaucracy.

That legal aid should even be considered in this matter is beyond the pale because Terry Hill never sold Martin Bryant any weapons, and probably lost his livelihood because of his determination to maintain the truth and not provide the DPP with that vital missing link in the trail of evidence. So are all of you out there going to sit back and let this happen, funded by hard-earned dollars screwed out of you by a government elected by the people for the people? No. The Port Arthur cover-up has gone too far already and it is time for government to concentrate on hard facts rather than use taxpayer funds in an attempt to create more pulp fiction. Now is the time for every responsible Australian to call for the dismissal of the official in The Legal Aid Commission of Tasmania responsible for authorizing this latest Orwellian outrage.

A WAY OF CENSORSHIP

by Lee Duigon

(Note: This news is breaking day by day, and often more than once a day, so it's unavoidable that some of this writing will be out of date by the time it's published. But one thing that won't be out of date is the current wave of Internet censorship—all of it aimed at Christians and political conservatives. I have been tracking this for months.)

June 26, 2019: The Chalcedon website,<sup>1</sup> is down. We don't know the cause, and six hours in, we haven't been able to get it back on line.

Coincidentally (or not!), this comes on the heels of a left-wing journalist saying he's "investigating" Chalcedon. Here's what he originally wrote: "I'm a journalist work-resolved and meanwhile, many of America's most prominent Christian ministries continue to be featured on SPLC's "hate map."

U.S. Senator Tom Cotton (R-Arkansas) in April asked the Internal Revenue Service to probe the SPLC for abusing its tax-exempt status by lustily engaging in partisan politics. According to the senator's press secretary, no answer from the IRS has yet been received.

Censoring "Nobodies"
It's not just big ministries that are being censored. Private individuals, ordinary citizens, have also felt the lash. The case of "Ginger" is typical [name changed to protect her identity]. "I was permanently suspended [from Twitter] in April of 2018," Ginger told Chalcedon, "when the first wave of silencing people who were basically nobodies started. I had nearly 5,000 followers, was a Trump supporter, and refused to worship David Hogg. I got a notice that I was permanently suspended for violating Twitter's hate speech policies. No examples, no 'please remove this tweet and you're back on the platform.' Just done. Period."

Several readers on my blog<sup>2</sup> have had the same experience. Somehow communications between us got cut off, and I was unable to interview them in time to be included in this article.

I got a taste of censorship from Facebook when they wouldn't allow me to post one of my weekly "Joe Collidge" satires: "Your message could not be sent because it includes content that other people on Facebook have reported as abusive."

What? I'd only just finished writing it a minute ago. What "other people" had had time to read it and report it as abusive? And it what way was it abuse to anyone? Facebook did not condescend to tell me, and I have never been given any explanation of their action.

Censoring the Doctor

Sometimes Big Tech's censorship tactics are more subtle: Mercola.com, known to subscribers as "Dr. Mercola," was "buried" by Google's latest search engine update.<sup>3</sup> His "crime" would appear to be his penchant for questioning safety and effectiveness of certain new vaccines, including the latest measles vaccine.

Instead of banning him outright, Google's new search engine removed his pages from any generalized search pertaining to a health topic. Before the update, his pages would come up if you searched for example, "heart disease." Now they don't. If you want to see what Dr. Mercola has to say about heart disease, you would have to search "mercola.com heart disease."

This tactic, Dr. Mercola reports, has driven down traffic to his website "by 99 percent." Almost as effective as banning him altogether. Meanwhile, a politically conservative website, News with Views,<sup>4</sup> has been banned outright by both Twitter and Google. The site has some 45,000 readers per day, but is in danger of going out of business. Big Tech can do that to you.

But so can free-lance left-wing trolls. My wife made the mistake of accepting a Seattle leftist as a Facebook friend. With this as an entrée, his Facebook Left friends swarmed onto her Facebook page and flooded it with left-wing rants—including calls for President Trump to die a violent death. This went on day after day until she "unfriended" the first liberal. Thankfully, his cohorts vanished with him.

The Man with Eyes Like "Hellfire"

June 26, 2019: Our website is still down, our webmaster's still laboring to bring it back online. Meanwhile, Andrea Schwartz has dug up the 2006 "report" by the Southern Poverty Law Center that first branded Chalcedon as a "hate group." The page is still up.<sup>5</sup>

This rant describes Mark Rushdoony as "peer[ing] down from the pulpit through glasses tinted the color of hellfire" and ending every sentence with an exclamation point. No one would ever recognize him from that description.

R.J. Rushdoony, Mark's father and Chalcedon's founder, is called "a racist and a Holocaust denier," which he wasn't, and accused him of trying to rearrange the world "so that everyone in it lives under strict Old Testament moral codes imposed by local theocracies," which he didn't. But no one from the SPLC has ever contacted Chalcedon to ask what the foundation really stands for. Not ever!

"There is no room for democracy in Reconstructionism, and no tolerance for dissent." As if the SPLC has ever displayed even a minuscule tolerance for dissent from its positions.

Warning its readers that Chalcedon is plotting a "future in which gay men and lesbians and adulteresses [only adulteresses, and not adulterers?] will be put to death," which is not Chalcedon's position, the article goes on to attack all the other speakers at the conference

This is the "evidence" for the complaint against Chalcedon. The SPLC has never taken any steps to verify a word of it.

For the left, the accusation is the evidence—as we saw plainly in last year's Senate confirmation hearings for Brett Kavanaugh's appointment to the Supreme Court.

Picking Their Target

How does Big Tech decide whom to censor? Obviously, Christians and conservatives are prime targets: who has ever heard of Facebook or Google censoring a leftist? So who is first in line when they decide whom to ban?

"Facebook monitors the offline behaviour of its users to determine if they should be categorized as a 'Hate Agent,'" Breitbart.com has reported.<sup>6</sup>

"Signals of hate" include "praising the wrong individuals," interviewing them, or appearing at events with them, or "if you self-identify" with a "Designated Hateful Ideology"—with Facebook doing all the designating. You may even get banned for "statements made in private but later made public"—and just try to prove you didn't say whatever it was, after you've been accused of saying it. The accusation is the evidence.

In all of this, Facebook itself gets to define what is "hateful," who is a "hate agent," which groups deserve to be "protected"—homosexuals, for instance—and which do not—heterosexual white males, usually. The lords of Facebook set their own standards and enforce them as they see fit, accountable to no one.

But that's not all. Facebook also has a "shadow government" of 30 to 40 left-wing lawyers and former government bureaucrats who decide what some 2 billion users can say or not say.<sup>7</sup>

The Vanity Fair article, written with Facebook's cooperation, make grim reading for anyone who 's not enthusiastic about very small groups of people dominating very large ones.

Their goal is to purge Facebook of any and all expressions of "hate," as defined by themselves. Consider their presuppositions, clearly laid out in the article. "Rights" are granted by the government, with Facebook taking upon itself the delineation of free speech rights. People are to be sorted into groups, by Facebook, with government and Facebook deciding which groups need protection from other people's speech, and how much protection they need relative to that enjoyed by other groups, and how much each group is to receive. All "genders" are real, and no one but a "hater" would ever dissent from that position: if anyone does, ban him. These people take themselves very seriously indeed

Morning, June 27, 2019: Our website is up and running again, after support staff worked on it all night. We still don't know exactly what caused the website to go down. What we do know is that attacks on Chalcedon by assorted leftists have been a constant feature of our landscape over the years.

The Dirty Jobs

Elsewhere in Facebook's censorship factory, some 15,000 "content moderators" view billions of posts—the standard is a thousand a week for each moderator—to weed out content that doesn't conform to Facebook's labyrinthine "community standards"—whatever that mean by "community."<sup>8</sup>

Some of the content offered for posting would violate just about anybody's community standards—videos of animal abuse, and cruelty, child abuse, violence, and more. You would think, with so much sheer filth pouring in every day, that the social media wouldn't have time to indulge in mere viewpoint censorship. But the moderators who get the dirty jobs are hired as contract labor and aren't paid that much

Why are they doing it?

Other than their obvious commitment to Far Left politics, and their passion that their vision should prevail over everybody else's, why are Big Tech and groups like the SPLC going overboard with censorship? (because Jews hate anything that's White and Christian! CIM)

Project Veritas has turned up a Google executive who said, on recorded video, that Google and its allies desire top control the outcome of the next presidential election to prevent "another Trump situation."<sup>9</sup> Google, she said, is committed to "never letting someone like Donald Trump come to power again." If you thought it was up to the voters of America to decide who wins the White House, you may be a bit behind the times.

Project Veritas' video was quickly scrubbed from YouTube and censored from other social media platforms, but the cat was already out of the bag.

The executive urged Senator Elizabeth Warren to desist from her calls for the government to break up Google simply because it's too big. Small companies, she said, "don't have the resources" to prevent President Trump's re-election—whereas Google and the rest of Big Tech are "working diligently to prevent" it.

"People like us are programmed," the executive boasted.

Their goal, she said, is to have "a single point of truth" across their entire line of products—left-wing "truth." She admitted that Google routinely suppresses "right-wing content."

"Right-wing content" would be anything of which Google executives disapprove, anything with which they disagree. Chalcedon does not endorse any political candidate; our concern is that Big Tech obviously pursues a clear political agenda.

What's "Reprehensible"?

Senator Josh Hawley (R-Missouri) has introduced a bill, the "Ending Support for Internet Censorship Act," that would strip the social media giants of certain protections they currently enjoy, unless they stop censoring views with which they disagree.<sup>10</sup>

Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act exempts social media platforms from the liability provisions that apply to publishers. The users, not the platforms, are viewed, in effect as the publishers so that the platform is not held responsible for anything a user says. In return, the platforms are expected to provide a public forum free of viewpoint censorship—which they clearly are not doing.

Hawley's bill is aimed at the big four, Google, Facebook, Twitter, and YouTube—platforms with 30 million monthly users and more than $500 million in global annual revenue. Smaller platforms would not be affected.

Replied a lobbyist for Google and Facebook, "This bill forces platforms to make an impossible choice: either host reprehensible but First Amendment protected speech, or lose legal protections that allow them to moderate illegal content like human trafficking and violent extremism."

So they only censor content because it's "reprehensible"? If that was all they did, I wouldn't be writing this article and you wouldn't be reading it. Is everything that they censor to be equated with "human trafficking and violent extremism"? If that's really the case, these people are not quite all there.

But when even the smallest dissent from a leftist position is smeared as "racism" or "hate," we have to expect them to censor everything with which they disagree.

How Much More?

A short list of abuses currently practiced by Big Tech would include: Drawing up lists of "protected minorities" who need for social media to protect them from being exposed to anyone who disagrees with their position and—dare we say the word—their privilege.

Branding as "reprehensible" viewpoints that include pro-life, pro-Second Amendment, pro-Christian, and pro-American positions.

An openly expressed desire to control the outcome of a national election, in effect disenfranchising the voters and subverting our republican form of government.

Vigorous attempts to silence anyone who questions "scientific" opinions favored by the platforms' owners, be it an opinion as to the humanity and right to life of a baby about to be born or one on the safety and effectiveness of a new vaccine.

The list could go on just about to Doomsday. In short, we have seen that the Far Left on the Internet, including the major social media, are quick to censor virtually anything that fails their battery of ideological litmus tests. In one instance, Facebook even censored the Declaration of Independence—and on the Fourth of July, at that.<sup>11</sup>

So far, it looks like Chalcedon has survived the latest attempts to stifle our ministry. We still don't know, at this writing, exactly why our site went down. It might have been a technological glitch somewhere. But given our experiences in these matters, we can't rule out a deliberate attack of cyber-vandalism. Our Webmaster Garry Morris said, "I can't as of yet pinpoint exactly what triggered the events that caused the site to go down. What I do know is that the server must have restarted due to some sort of provider maintenance or another unknown event ... We don't have conclusive evidence there were any such attacks. But I can't be certain at this point in time ... We are still investigating and looking for ways to remedy this situation if it happens again."

There is some pushback in Congress, and several court cases in the works. Whether there is time enough to rein in the censors' plans to direct the outcome of the next election cannot be known as yet. - - Pray that there is.

Library Builder: ONE MAN'S DESTINY

by C.R. Dickey

This is the story of the people of the Book. The people? Israel. The Book? The Bible. Surprising as it may seem, the Bible uses only the brief space of its first 11 chapters to narrate the mighty processes of creation—plus approximately two thousand years of history which includes such tremendous events as paradise lost, the rise and fall of empires, and the deluge. Beginning at chapter 12 it requires 1178 chapters to record one man's destiny—the story of Abraham and his family. - Hardbound.

THE CRUCIAL NATURE OF COQ10

Coenzyme Q10 (CoQ10) is a vitamin-like substance found in virtually all cells of the human body, including the heart, liver, skeletal muscles and in most plant and animal cells. As an antioxidant, CoQ10 protects proteins, LDL (“bad”) cholesterol, and mitochondrial DNA from oxidative damage.

As a participant in the production of cellular energy, CoQ10 helps ensure the body’s biggest energy consumers, the heart and the brain, are well fed.

Thanks to these two crucial functions, CoQ10 helps maintain blood pressure already within normal limits. It also supports the integrity of the heart muscle, increases circulation to the heart, improves exercise capacity and supports a normal heart rhythm. Additionally, it may protect against mild memory problems associated with aging.

Of course, none of these benefits can be realized if CoQ10 isn’t absorbed. Research indicates that the body takes up only a small fraction of traditional powder-based (crystalline) CoQ10.

The CoQ10 Absorption Dilemma

CoQ10 is highly lipophilic (fat-loving) and in its powdered, crystalline form is practically insoluble in water. This makes the absorption of typical CoQ10 supplements:

Poor: Less than 1% of orally administered CoQ10 permeates the aqueous environment of the gastro-intestinal tract into the blood.

Highly variable: Some individuals absorb considerably less CoQ10 than others.

Strongly dependent on stomach contents: Foods high in fat enhance absorption

Making matters worse, CoQ10 is a large molecule, contributing to its poor absorption. Plus, when CoQ10 is produced commercially, crystals are formed that melt when they reach 118°F or 48°C. Upon cooling, CoQ10 recrystallizes, which frequently results in even larger crystals and further lowers CoQ10 bio-availability.

[This statement has not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration. This product is not intended to diagnose, cure or prevent any disease].

ENHANCED CO-Q-10 from Vibrant Vibrations is a patented, oil-based formulation of CoQ10 in the ubiquinone form with clinically proven enhanced absorption. How is this enhanced absorption achieved? The answer is simple, and you may have learned it in high school chemistry: like dissolves like. Because CoQ10 is lipophilic, the scientists who developed ENHANCED encapsulated CoQ10 in an oil-based formulation to give it partial solubility, while adding specific antioxidants to stop re-crystallization, thus enhancing its absorption.

Ubiquinone CoQ10 Provides Multiple Health Benefits

CoQ10 functions as a carrier to transfer electrons across the membrane of the mitochondria, the energy-producing “factories” within cells, to drive production of adenosine triphosphate (ATP), or cellular energy. Heart muscles have the greatest concentration of mitochondria, 5,000 per cell, which is one reason why CoQ10 is so important for cardiovascular function

In its reduced form, ubiquinol, CoQ10 acts as an antioxidant to protect proteins, LDL (“bad”) cholesterol, and mitochondrial DNA from oxidative damage. Research has shown that CoQ10 supplementation exerts a sparing effect on vitamin E in healthy subjects, helping to maintain its antioxidant state. It also reduces levels of lipid peroxidation and this supports cardiovascular health.

Several factors can deplete CoQ10 levels in the body: Aging, certain medications, such as statin drugs and certain disease states.

Rice Bran Oil Allows for Lymphatic Absorption

CoQ10 crystalline powder does not dissolve completely in the lipid portion of the small intestine. The solution? Add fat. Not just any fat, however. Rice bran oil naturally contains gamma oryzanol, a plant sterol with lipid-like solubility. As a result, it enables the CoQ10 to be absorbed through the lymphatic system as a fat.

Tocopherols and Carotenoids Prevent Recrystallization

A form of vitamin E, tocopherols enhance the biological function of CoQ10, which in turn helps maintain the antioxidant state of vitamin E. Carotenoids are antioxidant phytonutrients that give orange vegetables like carrots and sweet potatoes their characteristic hue. Both tocopherols and carotenoids interfere with the recrystallization of CoQ10, allowing for better absorption.

ENHANCED-CO-Q-10 has enhanced bioavailability compared with CoQ10 crystalline powder. In a randomized, placebo-controlled study, 36 volunteers aged 22 to 58, with normal CoQ10 levels and no previous history of CoQ10 supplementation, were divided into three groups: CoQ10 crystalline powder (in a two-piece hard shell capsule), ENHANCED-CO-Q-10 (as a hermetically sealed soft gel), or a placebo.

In the first phase of the study, researchers determined steady state blood levels of CoQ10 by measuring fasting blood levels one week before supplementation began and again on days 0, 15, 30, and 45 (15 days after the end of supplementation). In the second phase of the study, peak absorption rate was determined by measuring fasting blood levels of CoQ10 before and five hours after taking a single 30-mg dose of the nutrient.

Phase I: Steady State Basal Blood CoQ10 Levels Over 30 Days of Supplementation 2.2 x Higher Steady State Levels: After 30 days, blood CoQ10 of the CoQ10 crystalline powder group rose by 76% (0.85 µg/ml to 1.5 µg/ml) whereas those of the ENHANCED group rose by 165% (0.85 mg/ml to 2.26 mg/ml) meaning ENHANCED boosts blood levels of CoQ10 2.2 times better than CoQ10 crystalline powder.

approached peak plasma levels after two weeks and then rose more slowly for another two weeks.

On-going Supplementation Needed: Once supplementation ceased, plasma CoQ10 levels dropped back to baseline levels after two weeks, indicating the need for on-going supplementation.

Phase II: Peak Absorption Rate 5 hours after ingestion 2.5 Higher Peak Absorption:

CoQ10 levels of the CoQ10 crystalline powder group increased 0.19 µg/ml (average absorption of 3.4 µg/ml), whereas those of the Enhanced group increased 0.48 µg/ml (average absorption of 9.3 µg/ml), meaning a single dose of ENHANCED increased blood CoQ10 levels 2.5 times more than CoQ10 crystalline powder.

2.6x Higher Total CoQ10 Absorption: After five hours, the CoQ10 crystalline powder group had absorbed just 693 µg/ml CoQ10, while the ENHANCED group had absorbed an impressive 1,813 µg/ml, 2.6 times more.

Better Absorption Means Increased Energy

When the subjects' CoQ10 levels rose, the practical results of supplementation were clear: The placebo group experienced no change in energy. Only 30% in the CoQ10 crystalline powder group felt such an increase. Yet a full 83% of subjects in the ENHANCED group noticed an increase in energy. That's not surprising, because CoQ10 feeds the mitochondria, the tiny energy producers within cells.

Who Should Take ENHANCED CoQ10?

ENHANCED CoQ10 is the perfect nutritional supplement for anyone who:

- Is over 40. With age, people produce less CoQ10 and become less efficient at converting ubiquinone (the form of CoQ10) to ubiquinol (the form used by the body to neutralize free radicals and create energy in the form of ATP). However, those who are young and healthy can easily make this conversion. Therefore taking ubiquinol may be an unnecessary expense for this population.

- Need a boost in energy. One of the primary benefits of CoQ10 is to increase energy production. In a randomized, placebo-controlled study, 83% of subjects taking ENHANCED noticed an increase in energy, compared to just 30% of those taking CoQ10 crystalline powder.

- Is Taking Statins. Certain medications, such as statin drugs, and certain disease states can deplete CoQ10 levels in the body. Supplementation can restore CoQ10 stores to normal levels (at least 0.8 µg/ml).

- Wishes to strengthen cardiovascular or brain health. Because of its role in energy production, CoQ10 supports the functioning of organs with a high demand for energy, such as the heart and brain. The heart muscle in particular is in constant need of a ready supply of energy to efficiently pump blood throughout the body. In fact, the majority of cardiac tissue is abundant in mitochondria, requiring ample and consistent levels of CoQ10 for proper functioning.

- Is looking for a non-dietary way to increase CoQ10 levels. Most people don't eat enough foods containing CoQ10, such as fatty fish, organ meats, and whole grains, to raise blood levels of the nutrient. In fact, the average dietary intake of CoQ10 is only 3-5 mg a day, much lower than what's needed to have any effect on CoQ10 concentrations. ENHANCED CoQ10 has been clinically proven to achieve significantly higher plasma concentrations of CoQ10 compared with CoQ10 crystalline powder.

ENVIRONMENTALISTS' ATTACK ON FAMILY

by Brad Macdonald

"Save the planet by ... not having kids?"

The most effective way to reduce humanity's carbon footprint and halt climate change, some environmentalists say, is to have fewer children. I heard this recently while watching the news with my 3-year-old daughter, a magnificent little person who brings immeasurable meaning and joy to our family. It is my hope that over the coming years, my daughter will begin to add meaning and value to her family, her friends, her local community and, eventually, the larger family of human beings. Many environmentalists, however, believe that the planet would be better off without my child. .... And yours.

This push—subtle now, but certain to grow more aggressive—is underway even as fertility rates across the Western world plummet. Many nations face a demographic crisis. Americans, Australians, British, Canadians, Germans, Italians and people in several other Western countries have fewer than two children per woman, ranking in the bottom third of 200 countries.

A fertility rate of 2.1 children per woman is required to sustain a population. Measured strictly by this number, the populations of Britain and America are already headed toward extinction. Yet these climate-change activists want us to have even fewer children.

One group, called the Voluntary Human Extinction Movement (VHEMT, pronounced 'vehement'), supports wiping out mankind. Its website says, "phasing out the human race by voluntarily ceasing to breed will allow Earth's biosphere to return to good health."

[for more see: <https://www.naturalnews.com/2019-09-24-climate-youth-puppet-greta-thunberg-george-soros.html>]

To be fair, many reports encourage having "fewer" children, not refraining from having children entirely. But it's the direction that is concerning, as well as the radical intent. This is an assault on family, the basic building block of human existence.

Westerners already have small families, but the Population Matters organization in the United Kingdom, actively supported by Sir David Attenborough, Jane Goodall and other influential figures, aggressively promotes having even fewer children. Under the headline "Life in a Smaller Family," its website states: "Smaller families can free people to devote more money and time to other aspects of their lives, such as friendships, careers, travel and activities that give them pleasure. Those who choose to be child-free will have very much more freedom, including (if they choose) to do other things to help protect the planet or help others.

"People who do want to experience the pleasures and challenges of becoming parents will often find raising their children much easier if they have a small family."

This language is polite, civilized and sophisticated—and instantly appealing to selfishness. Put your own happiness, affluence, hobbies, entertainments and pleasures ahead of the awesome, joyful miracle of having children. This is the language of the ungodly.

But it gets worse. The website also states, "While nuclear families are still the norm, in the 21st century, families come in all shapes and sizes. Choosing to be a parent also does not have to mean making children of your own and bringing more people into the world."

In other words: Don't have children. You can still be a sophisticated, 21st-century "family" if you engage in homosexual and other relationships of "all shapes and sizes." This is an attack on the traditional (God-given) roles within traditional, real marriage. It is an attack on the most important and beautiful physical accomplishment that two humans can experience together: the creation of sons and daughters! This radical-leftist, anti-children, anti-reproduction movement is about the destruction of the traditional family! What is ultimately motivating this assault on human family and mankind? Those who hate God also hate God's people, and would like to see them totally gone.

The ultimate purpose of each new life is nothing less than the expansion of God's Kingdom.

The ungodly hatred for family is becoming more visible, more dominant and more dangerous. We must not allow it to influence us. The way to counter this perverted message about family is to fill your mind with God's divine purpose for family, and His Kingdom.

And: BE FRUITFUL AND MULTIPLY!

DHARMA-CHRISTIAN "TOLERANCE"

by Richard Hoskins

The Hindu priesthood (Brahman priesthood) is extremely wealthy. This wealth is based on King Asoka's bequest. Before he died, King Asoka gave the Hindu priesthood one thousand million pieces of gold to advance the missionary work. This wealth has increased many times since then. Some contend that the Brahma priesthood controls most of the wealth of the world through their banks and their hired agents. The Hindu priesthood uses usury banks. Their offshoots and agents have created the "corporation" and "the trust." These techniques remove the ability to trace ownership. The practice of usury and corporate-monopoly in the Christian West would be impossible without the connivance of Hindu-Christian priests whose professed religion forbids both.

Reinterpreted Christianity

To neutralize opponents in a targeted nation, Hindu priests thoroughly study the opposing religion. They ask for teachers to come and instruct them. With the knowledge gained, they re-interpret the religion so that the new god may easily and comfortably merge with existing Indian gods. The new god may be called "Jesus." He may retain his teachings of "grace," "salvation," "repentance," and the parables, but, the meanings are changed into Hindu concepts. Jesus becomes a manifestation of Siva. Many Western Hindu-Christian priests have learned the following as if it came from the Christian God:

.....Christian priests willing to advance this changed version of the Christian WORD, or who merely agree to include the Hindu Dharma-tolerance and tone down the strident demands of the WORD, are the ones who receive prominent media coverage and financial backing. This provides a royal road for scoundrels to rapidly float to the top of theological cess-pools, and all too often, from there straight to prison.

Cooperating "Christian" seminaries receive largess, gifts and endowment miraculously appear. They may keep their religion, but embrace Dharma and teach it to your priest-in-training. Offending "Laws, Statutes and Judgments" condemning other religions and beliefs are quietly ignored. Dharma's "tolerance," "love," "non-violence," and "obedience to the kind." Most Christian seminaries now actually have Hindus, or Buddhist or Jewish offshoots teaching at their faculty, teaching future establishment priests to become Hindu-Christian. A degree in "theology" today is sufficient cause to arouse a congregations' suspi-

PROBLEMS

by R.J. Rushdoony

"Problems, problems," a man remarked recently. "How I would like to be rid of them." At times, all of us have echoed this feeling. We struggle along, year after year, hoping that our problems will soon be over, but they do not disappear. They merely change.

The problems can be in our family, our neighbourhood, our church, our country, or in ourselves. The problems can be a drought drying up our crops, or a flood, a killing frost, or a burning, scorching sun, or bushfire. "The good old days" sound good only because we have forgotten what the problems of those times were. Childhood, youth, middle age, and old age all have their problems, as does every era of history.

Problems are a part of life in a fallen world, and they are a necessary part of it, necessary to our testing and to our growth. Be sure of this: when you solve one problem, you create a new situation which has problems of its own. Problems are in part a product of sin and in part a condition of growth.

Before the Fall, no doubt Adam had decisions to make in Eden, as he farmed that paradise, and problems connected with developing and tending it. There was yet no curse, and hence no perversity to the situation, but there were problems to be resolved.

We need to accept problems and testing as a condition of life. Even in Eden, apart from the problems of farming, Adam and Eve were every day put to the test. The tree of the knowledge of good and evil could be bypassed or not. God presented them always with the problem of faith and obedience.

Solve one problem, and you will have another. This is life, and to be sick of problems is to be sick of life. Because this is God's world, every problem has its answer, and with every answer we graduate to another problem, until we finally pass on into God's eternal Kingdom and our reward. Problems are thus not only aspects of a fallen world, as well as aspects of a growing world, but they are also opportunities from God, to test us, to enable us to grow, and to further us in the fulfillment of our calling. No man can avoid problems. The man who tries to avoid problems only creates greater ones. If we regard them as opportunities, we are the stronger for it.
